

Turks Conquer; Firing Stops

By The Associated Press

Turkish invasion forces seized full control of the northern third of Cyprus on Friday and their advance sent the island's Greek Cypriot government fleeing from Nicosia. Then, by agreement, both sides stopped shooting at about dusk.

Turkey appeared to have conquered all the territory it sought in order to form a new autonomous state for the Turkish Cypriot minority on the island — outnumbered 4-1 by the Greek community.

The cease-fire took hold about dusk except for sporadic firing in Nicosia. A United Nations spokesman in New York said the firing was along the "Green Line" that separates the capital's communities of Turkish and Greek Cypriots.

Greece was swept Friday by anti-American demonstrations. The demonstrators shouted "Kissinger murderer" and other slogans and claimed the United States supported the Turkish invaders on Cyprus.

The Greek government rejected suggestions that talks with Turkey over the future of Cyprus reopen in Geneva. "It would be naive for anyone to believe that Greece would be prepared to take part in negotiations under the pressure of accomplished facts," Greek Premier Constantine Caramanlis said.

Caramanlis also turned down an invitation from President Ford to discuss the situation in Washington. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said he would consider going to Cyprus to help mediate the dispute between Greece and Turkey if asked, but would prefer to hold talks in the U.S. capital.

Nicosia resembled a ghost town. Reliable sources estimated some 150,000 Greek Cypriots had fled their homes in advance of the victorious Turkish forces.

"It's all over," a British military source said.

The cease-fire agreement Friday was made through announcements by Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit in Ankara and Cyprus President Glafcos Clerides.

Clerides and his government fled Nicosia for the south coast port of Limassol as Turkish jets and artillery pounded the outskirts of the capital. The departure was so hurried that records were left behind and the radio of the president's secretary was left on, blaring martial music.

Very heavy artillery and mortar fire still was heard in Nicosia for a few minutes after the cease-fire, apparently from Turkish guns directed at Greek Cypriot positions.

The sky was clear of Turkish planes but fighting continued around the international airport until the last minutes before the deadline.

The Turkish army with some 40,000 men and 300 tanks fighting against ragged Greek Cypriot forces armed with World War II weapons, carved out a line 65 miles long across the northern part of Cyprus.

The successful assault lasted 80 hours since it started at dawn Wednesday and left the Turkish army holding a belt from Famagusta on the east coast to Lefka on the west.

In Ankara, the Turkish premier told a news conference that the Turkish advances "laid the foundation for a federated Cyprus state with two separate autonomous regions" — one for the Greek Cypriot majority of 520,000 and one for the Turkish minority of 120,000.

Ecevit did not elaborate on his idea of a federated state. But he said Turkey did not intend to enforce a population displacement by moving thousands of Turkish Cypriots north and thousands of Greek Cypriots south.

"The Greeks can stay in Turkish areas and the Turks in Greek areas," he said. "One will be the guarantee of the other."

Ecevit said he would be willing to return to Cyprus peace talks at Geneva "as soon as possible," and ruled out fighting again even if new talks in Geneva failed to produce results.

Asked whether Turkey would be willing to give up any of the land captured by the Turkish troops on the island, Ecevit said, "This can be discussed later. I cannot say anything now. We do not have irredentist ambitions. We could have taken the whole island. But we have given up our empire for good."

He was referring to the Ottoman Empire which collapsed after World War I and controlled Cyprus from the 16th to the 19th century. Irredentism is the act of incorporating territories from which one has been deprived or which is ethnically related.

Rise In Exports To Hit Consumers

©The New York Times

New York — A dramatic rise in export orders for grain and soybeans in recent weeks is expected to do more damage to the consumer's budget than the recent drought in the Midwest.

As farm commodity experts view it, the volume of exports, not domestic production, has been determining the price of basic farm produce since the farm surpluses vanished in the massive sale of 19 million tons of grains and soybeans to the Soviet Union in 1972.

Normally, the nation exports two-thirds of its wheat, a fifth of its corn and half its soybean production. And the recent drought, while shaving output, has not produced the disaster one associates with that frightening word.

Actually, the drought did not have much effect on the wheat crop, 70% of which was planted last fall and harvested by July 1. Thus, the vital winter wheat crop was spared last month's dry weather.

But the corn crop, delayed at first by uncommonly heavy spring rains and then seared by the drought, has been reduced from the projected record 6.1 billion bushels to between 5 and 5.5 billion.

The harder soybean crop has been reduced to an estimated 1.3 billion bushels from the expected record of 1.6 billion.

Unless the corn and soybean crops are hit by further adverse weather before harvest time, some of the losses will be offset by the switch from feedlot to range feeding by the hard-pressed livestock industry this summer.

Even before the drought, many cattlemen had reduced herds and moved their animals to pasture to cut expenses caused by high corn and soybean prices.

Nevertheless, the government has said it would ask exporters to reduce their purchases so that formal export controls would not have to be imposed should the crops be threatened by more poor weather.

Commodity traders believe the request was aimed at hoarders, rather than those buying out of necessity. The farm experts interviewed by telephone in the Midwest this week conceded that the drought had provoked hoarding, as well as "scare buying."

"Basically," one grain exporter observed, "the foreign business was there all along. All the drought did was to hurry up some orders that would have come a bit later in the season."

One month ago, another exporter noted, export orders were 40% of the year-ago level. Foreign buyers, impressed by the Agriculture Department's forecast of still another record harvest, and burdened by high fuel import bills, were buying hand-to-mouth.

"When prices start rising," he added, "nobody wants to be the last one in line, just as no one wanted to be the first buyer in the market when farm prices were slumping last spring."

Murder Suspect May Be Abductor

Omaha — The first substantial lead in a four-year-old murder, intensively investigated by police here, was handed to officers when a man walked into police headquarters Thursday.

Margaret Ellen (Peggy) Giddings, daughter of Asst. Fire Chief George Giddings, was beaten and stabbed to death in her home while baby-sitting July 24, 1970.

Her partially clad body was found by her parents when they returned home after midnight.

Thursday night a 22-year-old drifter with a history of mental disorders came to police headquarters to ask "Do you want me for anything?"

At the order of County Atty. Donald Knowles, Richard Alexander Hill was booked Friday on suspicion of the murder.

In Lincoln, meanwhile, Police Capt. Roger LaPage said Friday that the man was a suspect in the July 31 abduction and rape of a 26-year-old Lincoln woman.

The woman told police she received a call at work saying her husband had been in an auto accident and was at Lincoln General Hospital.

When she returned to her car after learning that her husband was not in the hospital, she told police, a man was waiting in the back seat.

The woman said she was beaten and raped near the Gretna interchange on Interstate 80, and then taken to Omaha.

She was found wandering on Omaha street on Aug. 1 in a state of shock. Her car was found Aug.

5 with blood stains in it.

LaPage said Hill closely resembled a composite picture of the woman's abductor. Lincoln detectives were sent to Omaha Thursday and again Friday to question the suspect.

Knowles announced the decision to hold Hill in the Giddings case after a closed-door session at his office Friday afternoon.

Attending besides the suspect were Deputy County Atty. Sam Cooper, a stenographer, Lt. James Perry and Sgt. Maurice Barrett of the police homicide unit, and Dr. Chester Farrell, a psychiatrist.

Hill, who has no permanent address, is the first serious suspect in the murder, according to Knowles, though thousands of persons have been questioned.

Miss Giddings was baby-sitting with her one-year-old sister the night she was killed. Earlier in the evening she had taken the child to Memorial Park and police had theorized someone had followed her home from there.

The child was unharmed. Police reports say Hill lived his early years in Omaha and attended public school only until the second grade. He has apparently been drifting between Omaha and Lincoln for nearly five years.

Knowles said Hill has been confined in the Lincoln Regional Center and other state institutions for psychiatric disorders several times.

Knowles said he didn't know when he would decide whether to charge Hill in either case.

COLUMNS TO BE RESTORED ... Hilligus makes plans.

Lincoln Is Bicentennial City

By K. STEINBRUEGGE
Star Staff Writer

After a "few days" — 13 years, to be exact — Lincoln's almost-up-again, but still-down-again pillars are going to go up again.

The four historic columns, dismantled in 1961, will be cleaned and erected again as part of Lincoln's project for the national bicentennial. Lincoln, Johnson, Clay Center and Ravenna were named national bicentennial communities Friday.

For 45 years the "Lincoln Columns" stood at 23rd & O Streets, the north entrance to Antelope Park. Then, in 1961, the land was sold to Safeway Stores Inc. and the columns came down.

At the time, one city official said: "We're definitely going to place them elsewhere, but it will probably be several days before we decide just where to put them."

The partially ruined sandstone structures have been in storage ever since. They now lie in Sawyer Snell Park amid weeds and mud.

But things weren't always so inglorious for the pillars. They originally were part of the U.S. Treasury Building in Washington, D.C., erected in 1836 by President Andrew Jackson. President Abraham Lincoln stood between two of the columns to review Union Army troops in the Civil War.

The pillars were given to Lincoln, the city — not Abe, in 1907 by Cotter T. Brice, a friend of politician William Jennings

Bryan. Brice purchased them when the Treasury Building was remodeled, and they were erected at 23rd & O in 1916.

In the years since they're dismantling, freezing and weathering have eroded parts of the columns. They are blackened, chipped and cracked.

Now they will be used again as the backdrop for a scene of peace and meditation. Early next spring, the pillars will be erected in Pioneer's Park near one of the duck ponds, according to Dick Hilligus, director of city parks.

In keeping with the condition of the monuments, they will be purposely constructed to resemble ancient ruins. Hilligus said. Two columns about 25 feet high will be erected, along with two partial columns and other scattered pieces. Park landscape architect Larry Group conceived the plan.

Hilligus said this is all that can be salvaged from the original columns, which stood 32 feet high and weighed 40 tons each.

The restoration would cost about a $10,000, Hilligus said. However, M. W. Anderson Construction Co. of Lincoln has offered to do the job for $5,000 with no charge for labor or overhead, he said. The pillars were erected in 1916 for $4,300. The cost of the pillars themselves isn't known.

Restoration of the pillars is only one of 25 projects the Lincoln Bicentennial Committee intends to undertake as part of the national celebration.

Other plans call for the display of the oldest dwelling within the original plat of Lincoln. The home, known as the Thomas Hudson cabin, will be moved to a new location.

Additional projects include the preservation and restoration of the old City Hall; beautification of the area surrounding the Capitol; the establishment of a Bicentennial Park; ethnic festivals, and the teaching of traditional arts and crafts.

Dirtier Air Proposed

Washington (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Friday proposed regulations under which states which still have clean air would be allowed to let it get dirtier to the point that federal law allows.

The action was immediately attacked by the National Clean Air Coalition as a move that "will surely allow great amounts of dirty air in the nation's cleanest areas."

Under the EPA proposal, all areas of clean air would be automatically put in a classification allowing moderate industrial development.

But once that happens, any state could upgrade that classification to one where very little change in air quality would be the goal. Or it could move the state into a lower category where increases in pollution up to what the national law permits would be acceptable.

That lower class would permit construction of large developments such as coal burning power plants, oil shale projects and others which would add to the pollution.

Deputy EPA Administrator John R. Quarles Jr., asked if some states might not automatically opt for the lowest classification, said, "If that is a judgment reached by the people, that's the way it would work out."

NE Junior Missionary To Eskimo Teenagers

By PATTY BEUTLER

Chowing down on caribou and wild bear met Eskimo-style gave Donna Way a taste of native life in Alaska.

This 16-year-old Northeast High School junior was exposed to both big cities and remote villages during her several weeks stay at a Presbyterian mission for teenage girls in Fairbanks, Alaska.

Along with 11 other young "Volunteers in Mission" from several states, Donna — the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Way, 4330 Madison — flew to Anaktubuk Pass, a village of 100 Eskimos north of the Arctic Circle, for a four-hour visit.

Just Got Electricity

She was surprised to learn that the villagers had gotten electricity only three weeks prior to the group's visit.

Donna described the village as "primitive. 'People get along without conveniences.'"

Kettles had to be heated on the stove for hot water, and animal skins were strung across doorways. Most of the people live in sod houses, she said, since the village lies north of the timber-line and all wood must be imported.

There she dined on wild sheep meat as the villagers shared their daily fare with the mission group.

Eat First, Then Ask

"You eat first and then ask what it is," Donna advised.

The visitors conducted a worship service in English — which most of the children speak — and it was then translated into the Eskimo language for the elders. However, Donna said the mission team had rehearsed several songs in the Eskimo tongue for the occasion.

Donna observed that clothing was more appreciated by the villagers because "they don't get it that often."

While the temperatures dipped to 58 degrees during the village visit, Donna said that 70-degree weather prevailed during the Fairbanks stay.

Hospitality House

Living and working with the girls at Hospitality House in Fairbanks was the high point of the whole experience for Donna.

She said when Eskimo girls reach the age of 15 or 16 they are forced to leave the family home.

Hospitality House, Donna explained, was founded as a clearinghouse for these young girls until they finish their schooling or learn a trade.

Donna had a chance to see plenty of Northern American scenery in the eight-day drive from Minnesota to Fairbanks. The group also took an 800-mile trans-Alaska trip to get to Haines where they caught a ferry which delivered them to Ketchikan 36 hours later for a flight home.

Dried Caribou Teeth

In addition to many memories, Donna brought home two pieces of jade rock and a set of dried-out caribou dentures.

Unfortunately she couldn't bring the clear, pollen-free air home with her — a great disappointment to now red-eyed and sneezing Donna, after six allergy-free weeks in Alaska.

COLUMNS TO BE RESTORED ... Hilligus makes plans.

Lincoln Is Bicentennial City

By K. STEINBRUEGGE
Star Staff Writer

After a "few days" — 13 years, to be exact — Lincoln's almost-up-again, but still-down-again pillars are going to go up again.

The four historic columns, dismantled in 1961, will be cleaned and erected again as part of Lincoln's project for the national bicentennial. Lincoln, Johnson, Clay Center and Ravenna were named national bicentennial communities Friday.

For 45 years the "Lincoln Columns" stood at 23rd & O Streets, the north entrance to Antelope Park. Then, in 1961, the land was sold to Safeway Stores Inc. and the columns came down.

At the time, one city official said: "We're definitely going to place them elsewhere, but it will probably be several days before we decide just where to put them."

The partially ruined sandstone structures have been in storage ever since. They now lie in Sawyer Snell Park amid weeds and mud.

But things weren't always so inglorious for the pillars. They originally were part of the U.S. Treasury Building in Washington, D.C., erected in 1835 by President Andrew Jackson. President Abraham Lincoln stood between two of the columns to review Union Army troops in the Civil War.

The pillars were given to Lincoln, the city — not Abe, in 1907 by Cotter T. Brice, a friend of politician William Jennings

Bryan. Brice purchased them when the Treasury Building was remodeled, and they were erected at 23rd & O in 1916.

In the years since they're dismantling, freezing and weathering have eroded parts of the columns. They are blackened, chipped and cracked.

Now they will be used again as the backdrop for a scene of peace and meditation. Early next spring, the pillars will be erected in Pioneer Park near one of the duck ponds, according to Dick Hilligus, director of city parks.

In keeping with the condition of the monuments, they will be purposely constructed to resemble ancient ruins, Hilligus said. Two columns about 25 feet high will be erected, along with two partial columns and other scattered pieces. Park landscape architect Larry Group conceived the plan.

Hilligus said this is all that can be salvaged from the original columns, which stood 32 feet high and weighed 40 tons each. The restoration would cost about a $10,000, Hilligus said.

However, M. W. Anderson Construction Co. of Lincoln has offered to do the job for $5,000, with no charge for labor or overhead, he said. The pillars were erected in 1916 for $4,300. The cost of the pillars themselves isn't known.

Restoration of the pillars is only one of 25 projects the Lincoln Bicentennial Committee intends to undertake as part of the national celebration.

Other plans call for the display of the oldest dwelling within the original plat of Lincoln. The home, known as the Thomas Hudson cabin, will be moved to a new location.

Additional projects include the preservation and restoration of the old City Hall; beautification of the area surrounding the Capitol; the establishment of a Bicentennial Park; ethnic festivals, and the teaching of traditional arts and crafts.

Dirtier Air Proposed

Washington (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Friday proposed regulations under which states which still have clean air would be allowed to let it get dirtier to the point that federal law allows.

The action was immediately attacked by the National Clean Air Coalition as a move that "will surely allow great amounts of dirty air in the nation's cleanest areas."

Under the EPA proposal, all areas of clean air would be automatically put in a classification allowing moderate industrial development.

But once that happens, any state could upgrade that classification to one where very little change in air quality would be the goal. Or it could move the state into a lower category where increases in pollution up to what the national law permits would be acceptable.

That lower class would permit construction of large developments such as coal burning power plants, oil shale projects and others which would add to the pollution.

Deputy EPA Administrator John R. Quarles Jr., asked if some states might not automatically opt for the lowest classification, said, "If that is a judgment reached by the people, that's the way it would work out."

Analyst Says Lesson Of Cyprus Is That Force Still Works

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Writer

The obvious lesson to be drawn from the Cyprus crisis is that military might still prevails in an era that was supposed to usher in a new world of international law and order.

The message of this crisis, to a world that would seem badly in need of something different, clearly is: "Force works."

The premier of Turkey, Bulent Ecevit, could hardly have put the case more bluntly: What Turkey could not achieve at the negotiation table in Geneva was "in fact achieved by Turkish army in 24 hours."

Some Little Wars Go On

The implications are melancholy. The meaning behind it all seems to be that so long as a global political contest remains a fact of life — as it is in spite of detente and a surface appearance of relaxation — the only time little wars are stopped is when the risks begin to outweigh the profits.

Only the superpowers would have the authority, acting in concert, to put an end to perilous explosions such as the Cyprus fighting, and each superpower approached it with notable caution and an eye to what impact its actions might have on prospects in the political war.

Militarily, Greece is weak and politically she is rocky, having just emerged from a crisis of her own. She could not hope, as her premier conceded, to be a match for an immensely stronger Turkish army. So there could be no thought of a Greek invasion of Cyprus or of war with Turkey.

On the other hand, the Turkish government found it could make itself far more popular than it could have hoped to be some time ago by using military superiority boldly on Cyprus to confound the Greeks who have been hostile back-fence neighbors for centuries.

Once again — as in Palestine of 1948 and many another area — a United Nations call to stop fighting was ignored until the superior party could nail down significant gains.

The Turks, having bitten off a big chunk of Cyprus, then proceeded to announce a willingness to accept a cease-fire. They were by then ready to confront the United Nations with the accomplished fact.

Expulsion From U.N. Unlikely

Nowhere is it written in the annals of the United Nations that it has expelled a member for ignoring or defying its orders, nor is that likely to happen. The rule has been that the peace is to be restored at the point where either the winning party has made significant gains or all parties are satisfied that the risks of further fighting outweigh the prospective profits.

These performances seem to many of its friends to degrade the United Nations by turning it into little more than backdrop for cease-fire or peace arrangements when such a procedure suits the convenience of the warring parties or their respective allies and protectors.

What happens now? Maybe partition, since Turkey now controls a large piece of Cyprus and it doesn't look likely she'll be dislodged. At best, there might be confederation with iron-clad Turkish autonomy, however distasteful to the Greeks.

And what happens to NATO?

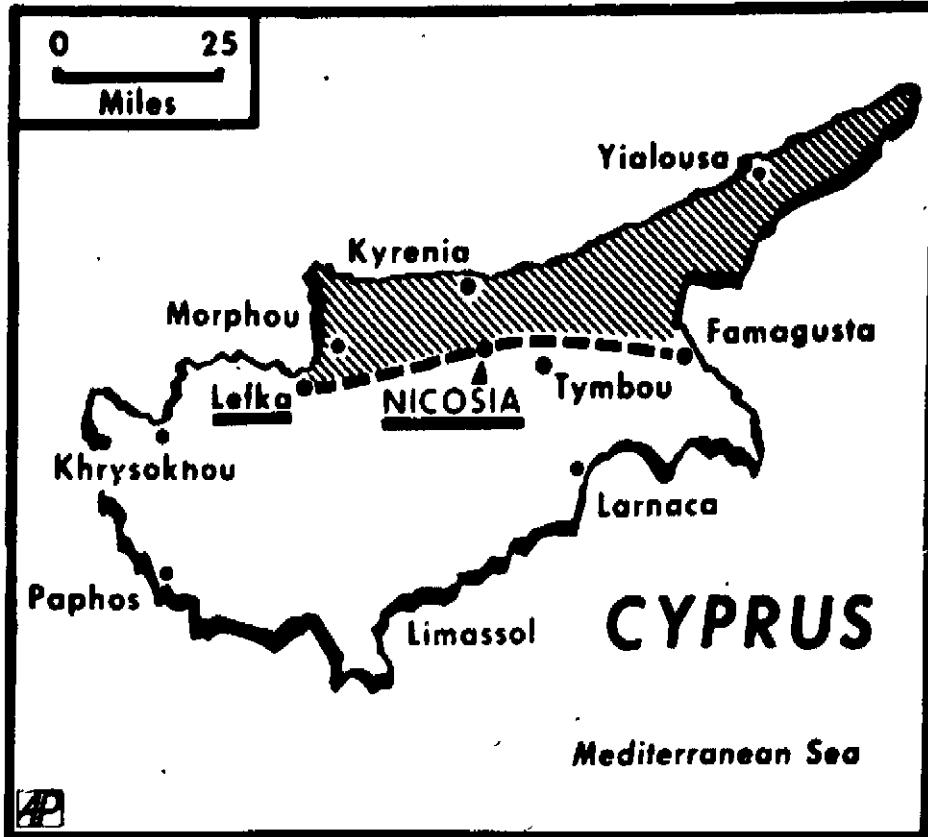

Greece has confessed to the world her weakness and vulnerability. Outside of the NATO military organization, she would be painfully exposed. Inside it, she would be the terribly uncomfortable partner of the very neighbor who had just so publicly and clearly humiliated her. It's a tough dilemma.

The aura of cold war is persistent in the eastern Mediterranean. Neither Greece nor Turkey is likely to forget why they became NATO members. They are unlikely to forget the events that produced the Truman Doctrine of 1947, when Greece was almost gobbled up by a Soviet-supported Communist offensive and when Turkey, too, was feeling severe pressures.

Kremlin Gambled And Lost

When conditions seemed ripe, the Kremlin gambled, seeking big gains at small risk. It lost because the Truman Doctrine infused massive military and economic aid into the two countries whose future means so much to the future of the whole Middle East.

The whole story can suggest to Greece that however painful her situation may be as a NATO member now, it could be a good deal more so outside it. That could lead Athens to have some sober second thoughts about leaving NATO's military structure.

Ervin: Watergate Men Blinded By Power Lust

Honolulu (UPI) — Sen. Sam Ervin said Friday the men who brought America Watergate were driven by a "lust for political power which blinded them to the laws of God as well as to the laws and ethics of man."

The chairman of the now-defunct Senate Watergate Committee spoke to several thousand members of the American Bar Association at a breakfast prayer meeting on the final day of the group's national convention.

Ervin said, "As long as I have a mind to think, a tongue to speak and a heart to love my country, I shall deny that the Constitution confers any autocratic power on the president, or authorizes him to convert George Washington's America into Gaius Caesar's Rome."

Ervin was frequently interrupted by thunderous applause, and said with indignation, "Watergate disgraced the presidential election of 1972."

The North Carolina Democrat said that although there have been other U.S. political scandals, "that fact does not excuse Watergate. Murder and stealing have occurred in every generation since earth began, but that fact has not made murder meritorious or larceny legal."

"One shudders to think," Ervin said, "that the Watergate conspiracies might have been effectively concealed" without the work of a free press, the Watergate Committee, "and the dedication and diligence of Special Prosecutors Archibald Cox and Leon Jaworski and their associates."

Ervin's speech was made on the final day of a convention preoccupied by Watergate.

By an overwhelming voice vote, the House of Delegates adopted a resolution Thursday opposing immunity for former President Richard M. Nixon in possible criminal proceedings. The resolution did not mention Nixon by name, but declared all men equal before the law, regardless of their high position or status.

The delegates also approved a resolution supporting measures pending in Congress which would allow draft evaders "to earn immunity" by joining the armed forces or by two years of alternate service contributing to the national welfare.

Ford Hears Freeze Suggestion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Completing his first week in office, President Ford searched for ways to cut federal spending Friday and received without comment a labor leader's suggestion that he freeze prices and wages to shock Americans "back into reality."

Ford held separate meetings with holdover economic counselor Kenneth Rush and budget officials after the Oval Office meeting with Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, the second labor leader Ford has conferred with in four days.

As Ford's first-week anniversary passed, there were these other developments at the White House:

—His new lawyer, Philip Buchen, relayed a decision that Richard Nixon's tapes and documents will remain in White House custody until Watergate legal issues are resolved.

—Ford rounded out his press staff, naming Justice Department information officer John W. Hushen as deputy press secretary to Jerald F. terHorst. In addition, two Ford vice presidential aides, Paul Millich, and William Roberts, will be blended into a staff of five holdover Nixon administration spokesmen — James Holland, Larry Speaks, John Carlson, Tom DeCair and Andrew Falciewicz.

—Ford met with his first visiting chief of state, King Hussein of Jordan, and arranged to host a White House state dinner in the King's honor Friday night.

Fitzsimmons said he also suggested that price rollbacks might follow a wage-price freeze, and again said Ford listened without comment.

Emperor Loses Remaining Powers

Addis Ababa (UPI) — Ethiopia's armed forces Friday stripped all remaining powers from Emperor Haile Selassie, 82, ending a reign of 36 years on a throne which legend traces back to the Queen of Sheba.

The army also sent warplanes screaming low over the capital and troops marched into the city in a show of strength threatening the civilian government of Prime Minister Michael Imru. Selassie had ruled Ethiopia, first as regent, then as emperor, since 1916. In 1936, he captured world attention with a dramatic appeal to the League of Nations in Geneva for its help against the Italian invasion of his Christian empire.

The league did nothing and its inaction helped destroy the world body and bring on World War II.

Communist Links Probed

Seoul — South Korean investigators began to examine the possibility that the assassination attempt on President Park Chung Hee, in which his wife was killed, may be linked to several of his adversaries — the Communists, his 1971 presidential election opponent and the Japanese. Meanwhile, the Seoul district prosecutor described Mrs. Park's killer, Moon Se Kwang, a Korean who had been living in Japan, as a dedicated Communist.

Labor Costs Critical

Seoul — In rapidly industrialized Korea, with no natural resources except its cheap work force, the cost of labor has become a critical issue to the government of President Park Chung Hee.

Coal Price Rises

New York — The price of coal has advanced sharply in recent months as the nation's electric utilities, faced with a possible coal strike this fall and increased demand for coal from foreign buyers, have scrambled to maintain their stockpiles. In some cases, the price has risen to as much as $45 a ton.

False Statements Checked

Washington — The FBI began looking into false statements attributed to two representatives inserted in the Congressional Record. An FBI spokesman says agents were looking into any possibility of a violation of federal law and findings would be turned over to the U.S. attorney.

Investigations Promised

Washington — Food and Drug Commissioner Alexander Schmidt promised a thorough review of charges that his agency harassed physicians when they recommended against new drugs proposed to the agency by drug manufacturers.

Lockheed Given Missile Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy awarded a $1.3 billion contract Friday to Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. to start production of a new 4,500-mile-range Trident missile to be fired from U.S. submarines.

The contract also sets in motion advanced development of a new maneuverable warhead for the Trident missile designed to help the missile evade any defenses.

The new missiles would be the first generation of new missiles to be installed in a fleet of 10 huge Trident submarines. Each submarine will carry 24 such missiles when they start going to sea in the late 1970s.

The Navy has said that the new missiles also could be installed in a current generation of smaller Poseidon submarines. The Navy intends to maintain a fleet of 31 Poseidon subs, with 16 missiles each.

Like the present Poseidon weapons, the new Trident will be armed with multiple independently targetable warheads (MIRVs). But the Trident missiles will be bigger, carry more MIRVs and will have a striking range more than 1,000 miles deeper than the present Poseidon weapons.

Later, the Navy expects to develop an advance 6,500 mile range version of the Trident weapon.

Such technological advances are permitted under the current strategic arms limitations agreement with the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union already is deploying new Delta class missile-firing submarines carrying warheads with a 4,000-mile range.

So far as is known, however, the Russians do not yet have MIRVs for their submarine-launched weapons, as they do for land-based missiles now nearing deployment.

The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to limit sharply their antimissile (ABM) defenses, but Pentagon officials said the Navy will go ahead with the Mark 500 maneuverable warhead, called "Evader," as a hedge.

Fight Rages Near Saigon

Saigon (UPI) — Heavy fighting raged Friday within 16 miles of Saigon and Da Nang, South Vietnam's two largest cities. The two-front Communist offensive pushed the military death toll since the Jan. 28, 1973, cease-fire declaration past 100,000, the Saigon command said.

Military officers also reported nine worshippers were killed and more than 60 others wounded when a South Vietnamese helicopter accidentally fired rockets during Thursday evening mass into the Catholic Church at Dai An, 25 miles northeast of Saigon.

Tank-backed North Vietnamese forces moved to the bank of the Saigon River, 16 miles north of the capital.

Analyst Says Lesson Of Cyprus Is That Force Still Works

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Writer

The obvious lesson to be drawn from the Cyprus crisis is that military might still prevails in an era that was supposed to usher in a new world of international law and order.

The message of this crisis, to a world that would seem badly in need of something different, clearly is: "Force works."

The premier of Turkey, Bulent Ecevit, could hardly have put the case more bluntly: What Turkey could not achieve at the negotiation table in Geneva was "in fact achieved by Turkish army in 24 hours."

Some Little Wars Go On

The implications are melancholy. The meaning behind it all seems to be that so long as a global political contest remains a fact of life — as it is in spite of detente and a surface appearance of relaxation — the only time little wars are stopped is when the risks begin to outweigh the profits.

Only the superpowers would have the authority, acting in concert, to put an end to perilous explosions such as the Cyprus fighting, and each superpower approached it with notable caution and an eye to what impact its actions might have on prospects in the political war.

Militarily, Greece is weak and politically she is rocky, having just emerged from a crisis of her own. She could not hope, as her premier conceded, to be a match for an immensely stronger Turkish army. So there could be no thought of a Greek invasion of Cyprus or of war with Turkey.

On the other hand, the Turkish government found it could make itself far more popular than it could have hoped to be some time ago by using military superiority boldly on Cyprus to confound the Greeks who have been hostile back-fence neighbors for centuries.

Once again — as in Palestine of 1948 and many another area — a United Nations call to stop fighting was ignored until the superior party could nail down significant gains.

The Turks, having bitten off a big chunk of Cyprus, then proceeded to announce a willingness to accept a cease-fire. They were by then ready to confront the United Nations with the accomplished fact.

Expulsion From U.N. Unlikely

Nowhere is it written in the annals of the United Nations that it has expelled a member for ignoring or defying its orders, nor is that likely to happen. The rule has been that the peace is to be restored at the point where either the winning party has made significant gains or all parties are satisfied that the risks of further fighting outweigh the prospective profits.

These performances seem to many of its friends to degrade the United Nations by turning it into little more than backdrop for cease-fire or peace arrangements when such a procedure suits the convenience of the warring parties or their respective allies and protectors.

What happens now? Maybe partition, since Turkey now controls a large piece of Cyprus and it doesn't look likely she'll be dislodged. At best, there might be confederation with iron-clad Turkish autonomy, however distasteful to the Greeks.

And what happens to NATO?

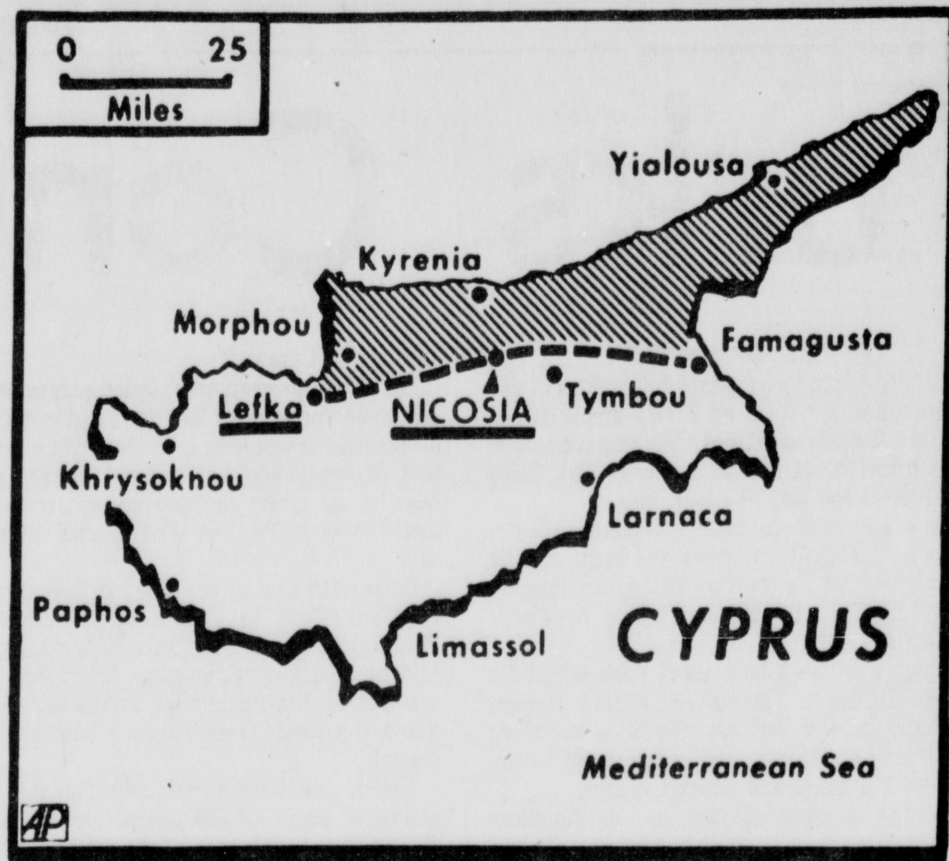

Greece has confessed to the world her weakness and vulnerability. Outside of the NATO military organization, she would be painfully exposed. Inside it, she would be the terribly uncomfortable partner of the very neighbor who had just so publicly and clearly humiliated her. It's a tough dilemma.

The aura of cold war is persistent in the eastern Mediterranean. Neither Greece nor Turkey is likely to forget why they became NATO members. They are unlikely to forget the events that produced the Truman Doctrine of 1947, when Greece was almost gobbled up by a Soviet-supported Communist offensive and when Turkey, too, was feeling severe pressures.

Kremlin Gambled And Lost

When conditions seemed ripe, the Kremlin gambled, seeking big gains at small risk. It lost because the Truman Doctrine infused massive military and economic aid into the two countries whose future means so much to the future of the whole Middle East.

The whole story can suggest to Greece that however painful her situation may be as a NATO member now, it could be a good deal more so outside it. That could lead Athens to have some sober second thoughts about leaving NATO's military structure.

Ervin's speech was made on the final day of a convention preoccupied by Watergate.

Housing Starts Slump

•The New York Times

Washington — Housing starts plummeted in July to an annual rate of 1,335,000 units from 1,590,000 in June, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

The July rate of starts was the lowest since the long slide in housing construction began early last summer, and was the worst since May 1970 when there was also a money squeeze with high interest rates. Starts in July a year ago were at a rate of 2,152,000 units.

In addition, there was a small further decline in permits for new construction from the already reduced level of earlier months. The July permit rate was 1,043,000, compared with 1,106,000 in June and 1,814,000 in July a year ago.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary James T. Lynn called the July figures "disheartening."

He said "we continue to seek new, but sound, ways to ease the current burdens on potential homebuyers and homebuilders," calling this "a top-priority matter." But Lynn said "dramatic improvement" in housing construction "requires a successful attack against what President Ford characterizes as domestic public enemy No. 1: inflation."

Hope Seen In Bill

One sign of hope is contained in the big housing and community development bill Congress sent to Ford this week.

Among its many provisions is one that would raise the maximum amount of a mortgage that can be insured by the Federal Housing Administration. This increase is regarded by officials as essential to success of the government's "tandem plan," which amounts to a subsidized interest rate for mortgages on nearly 300,000 new homes.

Because of the steep rise in the price of an average new home, the old FHA mortgage ceiling of $33,000 became obsolete. Even with the subsidized interest rates, builders could not sell homes with a mortgage of only $33,000. As a result the tandem plan has languished, with only 128,000 units of the 300,000 authorized having been started.

The new bill, expected to be signed by Ford, would raise the mortgage ceiling to $38,000 on "tandem plan" housing and to $45,000 for all other FHA mortgages. Officials said Friday that this increase should be enough to revive the tandem plan.

Funds are available under the plan for 72,000 units at a mortgage interest rate of 7½% and 100,000 units at a rate of 8%.

7% Unemployment Seen

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., cited estimates this week that housing starts may drop to the level of 1,100,000 to 1,200,000 and remain there. He said that if that should happen, this sector of the economy alone would be enough to push the national unemployment rate up to 7% of the labor force from 5.3% at present.

There have already been demonstrations of unemployed construction workers.

While several factors have held back housing starts — including "no growth" policies in a growing number of suburban communities — the chief problem has been a lack of mortgage funds and very high interest rates on funds that are available, now above 9%. The lack of availability of funds has been caused mainly by an outflow of savings deposits from savings banks and savings and loan associations, which supply the bulk of the nation's mortgage money.

Boy Survives Lion Attack

Brandon Gates, 3, bites his finger in pain after being rescued from the jaws of a lion by a woman who pounded the animal with her shoe. Doctors in San Jose, Calif., said Friday the boy suffered severe cuts on his knee, but he escaped permanent injury in the Baby Zoo incident. Witnesses said Brandon climbed over a fence to enter the lion's cage.

Oil Dollars Flee Britain

London (AP) — Arab oil money is being pumped out of a weak British economy for reinvestment in the United States, bankers said Friday.

Banking sources said the large amounts of money withdrawn in the past two days indicate Arab concern over the British economic outlook and a newfound confidence in the "Ford dollar."

It was the first significant shift of oil money from London to New York since the oil producers began their 400% price increases last October, the sources said.

If it continues, the shift would have a profound effect on the British economy, including substantially weakening the British pound in world money markets. The gloomy British economic picture is reflected by the London Stock Market, which closed Friday at its lowest level in nearly 16 years.

As a direct result of the Arab withdrawals, dealers said, the pound lost half a cent against the dollar in the London foreign exchange Friday. The pound closed at $2.3405, its lowest level in five months.

Because Arab governments are able to conceal their operations, bankers here do not know the precise amount or source of investment funds involved. But, as one informed banker said, "it's big money." Official Bank of England figures show that about $4 billion in Arab oil money was deposited in Britain so far this year.

The British pound has been largely dependent on the Arab financial support, and loss of Arab investment will undermine its strength.

Vinyl Chloride In Sprays Barred

Higher food prices. A stepped up government fight against inflation. An end to the ban on gold ownership.

These were some of the developments affecting consumers this week:

AEROSOL SPRAYS: The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission voted Friday to ban the use of vinyl chloride in household aerosol sprays under its jurisdiction. The ban includes things like spray paints and finishes, protective and decorative coatings, paint removers, adhesives and solvents. Vinyl chloride, used as a propellant in the sprays until recently, has been linked to 24 cases of a rare liver cancer. Under the ban, any consumer possessing a can containing vinyl chloride can return it for a full refund. Richard O. Simpson, chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, estimated that two to three million spray cans containing vinyl chloride may be in American homes, with a potential refund value of about $5 million. Other agencies already have acted to ban aerosol drugs, cosmetics, pesticides and other products containing vinyl chloride.

CROPS-FOOD: The government announced that the corn crop will be below expectations and predicted that farmers would harvest 12 per cent less of the grain this year than they did in 1973. The smaller harvest, caused by drought in the Midwest, will mean higher meat prices in 1975.

On the brighter side, the Agriculture Department report said that the wheat harvest will be 8 per cent higher than last year, even though it won't be as big as predicted.

Congress Chastised

Washington (UPI) — The American Automobile Association accused the Transportation Department Friday of quietly attempting to greatly increase maximum truck weights on Interstate highways, and chastised Congress for not making an issue of it.

A mass transit bill now pending before the House contains a big-truck section that would allow maximum truck weights to increase from 73,280 pounds to 90,000 pounds if the weight was spread properly on a sufficient number of axles beneath the truck.

The AAA said it had learned that Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar was proposing changes in this section that would allow weights to go as high as 107,000 pounds. The AAA called the Brinegar proposal "an absurdity piled on an outrage."

On With Centrum

Hopefully, the City Council has set an irrevocable course toward ultimate realization of the Centrum complex in downtown Lincoln. In deciding in favor of revenue rather than general obligation bonds for some $3.63 million of the project, the council jumped its final hurdle.

Not that no more monkey wrenches could be thrown in. They could. A lawsuit is likely on the validity of the city's classification of the property involved as blighted.

It is that classification of the block, 11th to 12th, N to O, that qualifies this revitalization project for municipal sponsorship under state law. A successful lawsuit could, again, block the project but there is no recourse here but to leave that in the hands of providence.

As far as council action is concerned, the die has been cast. The revenue-bond route avoids a vote of the people. Normally, this would bother us some but the city is rightfully entitled to pursue whatever course is legally available to it and that is the case with the revenue bonds.

Reality May Be Harsh

Americans may not be too happy in the coming year or so and it isn't likely to be the result of any political forces. The situation was summed up by a federal agricultural official visiting Nebraska this week.

Looking at corn for purposes of disaster relief payments, the official said the situation is terrible. He had viewed field after field of dry-land corn that normally produces well over 100 bushels an acre but which this year will yield from 10 bushels down to none.

He went on to explain that difficult times in the food market are ahead. What he means is that the price of food is going to go up. Additionally, the quality of some things such as beef may suffer.

So the prospect is one of higher costs and maybe even some drop in quality. The official spoke out against government price controls on food as a remedy.

We believe he is right. The only remedy we see is for the American people to tighten their belts. They are going to have to face the hard fact that they may not be eating as well in the near future as they have in the past.

Putting it another way, the standard of living is going to decline. That decline may

Other things, too, may not be perfect about this project. The Centrum, when completed, will contain a large parking garage, a bus stop area and retail stores.

There may be some who would like a different assortment of things. We regret the disruption of established businesses that this project will create. We know there are some who oppose the project on the basis of philosophical and political considerations.

It is not a perfect adventure in every way. But it is such a vital ingredient in the future stability of the downtown that it merits support as now proposed.

Those things which can be said against it do not come up in importance to its great potential benefits. Time, too, is of the essence. If this project fails, the entire downtown situation will be thrown into limbo.

We are not sure at all that downtown can survive another period in limbo, where it has already been far too much of the time in the past. We hope the council now moves with dispatch on all the steps now necessary to move Centrum along to ultimate reality.

be temporary or it may be a fairly permanent thing.

An oil industry spokesman has criticized a recent editorial here that inferred that the public might be getting suckered by the petroleum industry. The real fact is, he said, that there is not enough petroleum to meet all demands. The American people simply are going to have to face the fact that there will be less gasoline and some other forms of energy and at a higher price.

Our way of life as it pertains to petroleum, he said, is going to have to change.

Well, whether the oil companies have been right or wrong in anything they have done, we do agree that change is the most likely prospect. Whether good or bad, the nation's pattern of energy consumption is going to have to alter.

And it will be altered, whether we face the situation with resignation or whether we are dragged into it kicking and screaming. We cannot predict the future but we are convinced that the next generation in this country will live in a style considerably different than the present generation.

Veep Choice Intricate

Agnew Garner Humphrey Johnson Ford Truman

WASHINGTON — Vice presidents have been chosen for many reasons — John Nance Garner by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 because he could deliver the presidential nomination; Lyndon B. Johnson by John F. Kennedy in 1960 because he might help to carry the South in the general election; Spiro T. Agnew by Richard M. Nixon in 1968 because he symbolized the new conservative ethnic politics.

President Ford has apparently not confided to his advisers what criteria he will use in making his selection, let alone whom he is likely to choose. But he is nothing if not a political being, so he must have been wondering whether he should choose someone who would ultimately strive to succeed him or someone who would not.

The question perturbs many politicians in these first days of the Ford administration because of the largely unspoken tradition, entirely new in American political life, that has grown up since World War II: It is presumed — by the politicians, by the press and by the public — that a vice president will be nominated for president by his party when the president under whom he serves leaves office.

Since 1945, four of seven vice presidents have become president — Harry S. Truman and Johnson succeeding presidents who died in office, then winning election in their own right; Gerald R. Ford succeeding a president who resigned; Richard M. Nixon winning election on his own.

In a limited sense, dynasties have been established. Dwight D. Eisenhower chose Nixon who chose Ford, although Nixon had to wait eight years to claim his inheritance. Kennedy chose Johnson who chose Hubert Humphrey.

Whether at national conventions or under the 25th Amendment, the choices — despite obligatory "consultations" — were made by one man. Submission of the names of those chosen to conventions or Congress for ratification has been largely ritualistic.

The reasons for this new pattern in American politics are not entirely clear. But surely they include the rise of the United States as a world power, which has enabled vice presidents to assert that they embody needed continuity and international experience, and the advent of television as a political weapon, which has made vice presidents better known than potential rivals.

The procedure, it can be argued, is anti-democratic. Both parties — the Democrats, to be sure, rather more than the Republicans — have expended considerable effort in recent years in opening the presidential nominating process to the rank-and-file, on the theory that presidential nomination, in the United States, is half of election.

But the process is not often truly "open." In 1948 and 1964, the Democrats renominated a sitting president; in 1968 they nominated a sitting vice president. In 1956 and 1972, the Republicans renominated a sitting president; in 1960 they nominated a sitting vice president and in 1968 a former vice president.

The exceptions tend to prove the rule. Out of power for decades, the Republicans turned in 1962 to a "pre-fabricated" candidate who could claim many of the assets claimed by vice presidents — Eisenhower. In 1964, they chose Barry M. Goldwater in part because Nixon, the "legitimate" successor, had tried in 1960 and failed.

Had Humphrey won in 1968, few Democrats doubted that Edmund S. Muskie, his running mate, would have been considered the logical Democratic nominee in 1972 or 1976. Indeed, his status as a defeated vice-presidential nominee prompted his selection as a party spokesman in 1970 and his short-lived status as the party's presidential front-runner in 1972.

Ford is now facing the same situation. If he chooses George Bush, the Republican national chairman, or Sen. Howard H. Baker, Jr., R-Tenn., his choice will gain a presumptive claim on the party nomination when Ford leaves office, in 1976 or 1980 or whenever.

If, on the other hand, he chooses former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, the chances of an open selection process at the next transition will be greater.

Should Ford fail to complete his term, of course, Rockefeller would succeed him. Even if Ford served through 1976, the former governor might be able to run; he would be 68 years old by then. But at 72 in 1980, even the robust Rockefeller would be out of the running.

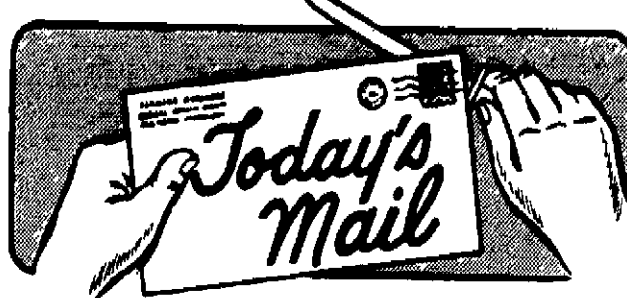

These circumstances are not lost on Republican professionals, among whom a vigorous debate is raging.

Some would rather leave the question of long-range succession open. They argue that it is tactically unwise, as well as undemocratic, to determine now who the dominant post-Ford Republican will be.

Others, however, would like to settle the question now, thereby (in their view) forestalling a hectic primary fight in 1976 or 1980. Fluidity in nominating politics may be desirable in the abstract, and may be useful for the majority, they contend, but it is too divisive for the minority party.

Which view the President holds is still a secret.

Saved Souls Are Better

Watergate is just the tip of the malaise that permeates our society. For the affluent, the corporate is "Papa" who takes care of them and sets the moral tenor of their performance. It is a papa without a heart, a soul, but rather a computer that would be happier if it had to hire nobody and could gather in all the money of the world.

It demands results, obedience and it makes trampling on the helpless fair game. The auto companies deceive the people about mileage, the drug houses deceive them about performance, the giant electronic companies secretly set prices to bilk the public, the banks and insurance companies exert unusual influence to get favors for their benefit and against the public interest. The fertilizer companies sell where they can get the best price even if it is against the interest of the country. The oil companies extol competition verbally and then, in fact, suppress it.

This is the establishment and the only way to constrain it is if a high moral conscience rolls over the land whereby people look beyond the word to the deed. If the primary objective ceases to be materialism and the rallying cause is decency and fairness.

Efficiency must not be confused with greed and inhumanity. Profits are nice, but saved souls are better.

Conspiracy Against Farmer

Anyone who gives any credit to the boycotters for bringing down the price of meat is very poorly informed. All they did was build a wall of hatred between the farmer, who is also a VERY BIG CONSUMER, and the city consumer who has demonstrated shocking ignorance of all the people involved in the food industry.

Any credit for bringing down the price of meat belongs to the California farmers and ranchers who sued retail chains for price-fixing and won. Also, to two Nebraska state senators, Loran Schmidt of Bellwood, and John DeCamp of Neligh, who have a suit pending against A&P and Safeway and cattlemen's and farm organizations themselves.

There is wide variance in prices from store to store in the same city. Pricing in other goods is more ridiculous than our present meat prices. It is very silly for people to believe they should have exorbitantly high wages and the farmers should not be equally entitled to a cost-of-living income.

The suits against the milk industry for advertising gimmicks are an example of how city consumers feed inflation. (I'm a farmer's wife but city-raised and a part-time news stringer.) We do not raise anything but grains.

The milk advertising on television is no more false and off-beat than those made by 96% of the other advertisers. Why don't these consumer groups sue them? Because there's a selfish and ignorant conspiracy to destroy the American farmer. If these people don't wake up and learn, it will eventually backfire on them.

The recent letter signed "Sick of Slaughter" compels me to respond with additional information concerning the tragedy of the attempted escape from the Huntsville, Texas, prison.

Perhaps local papers did not report all the details. We were visiting in Texas during this period and read accounts of the escape in several newspapers and we also heard the TV reports.

Autopsies on the convicts and two hostages as well as the confession of the surviving escapee prove that the convicts murdered the hostages and then killed themselves in a previously arranged suicide pact. Local accounts, including those of the bereaved families, indicate a belief that the police did the best they could in an extremely difficult situation.

It is hoped the persons responsible for smuggling weapons inside the prison will be apprehended promptly.

A British Family Copes

(Editor's Note: The writer recently interviewed a middle-class family in East Anglia to see how the British are coping with inflation. The names have been changed at the family's request.)

CAMBRIDGE, England — "For the first time since the war, I think our family has experienced a relative fall in our standard of living," said Richard Burwell, a scientific consultant. The Burwells — Richard, his wife Sally, and their two children — live on a combined annual income of 4,700 pounds ($10,500). That is 25% more than the family earned last year, an increase made possible by Sally's new part-time job with the Cambridge University Press.

Nevertheless, the Burwells have had to do a lot of belt-tightening. Since the February election that returned the Labor Party to power, Britain's middle class has been hit harder by new taxes than any other group. In addition, retail prices are 17% higher today than in August, 1973. All in all, the Burwells and families like them are worse off than they were a year ago.

The annual vacation abroad was the first luxury to go. The Burwells had been planning on a package tour to Greece, but the surcharge on fuel made the transportation cost prohibitive. They will go camping in Norfolk instead.

In April the Burwells took in a lodger in their four-bedroom home for the first time. The student, who pays $20 a week for his room, gives Sally's household budget some much-needed breathing room.

"I never would have done this three years ago," she says. "It does sort of interfere with our family privacy."

Entertainment habits have changed, too. The Burwells haven't been to the theater in a year, and they have taken in only one movie.

For the time being, it's mostly television and the pub. Richard says he and Sally are buying more beer and less hard liquor, but that beer prices have been rising so fast that they will have to cut down their visits to the local tavern.

To save on food, Richard now spends eight hours a week tending his vegetable garden. He grows squash, beans, peas, potatoes, carrots, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower on a plot allotted him by the local council. The net saving, he calculates, is $500 a year. The family diet now centers on liver, chicken, fish fingers and eggs, all of which are cheap at present. Sally buys in bulk when possible and stores the supplies in the freezer.

What hurts the Burwells most are the rising charges for heating, electricity, the telephone, property taxes, and private school fees for the older child. Although Richard is a law-abiding citizen, he has yet to pay the first installment of his local taxes, which are 40% higher than a year ago. The installment fell due July 1, but he does not plan to pay up until Oct. 1.

The price of heating oil for the boiler the Burwells installed in 1970 has almost doubled over the past 12 months. The fuel now costs 51.1 cents a gallon, and could increase further. The telephone bills have been rising so fast that the Burwell children are now restricted in the number of calls they may make.

When all accounts are added up, the Burwells find that they must dip into their modest savings at the rate of about $250 a year simply to break even. In 1970 Richard was able to save that much, and Sally wasn't working then. "I don't think things will improve until the oil starts flowing up North," Richard predicts, referring to the offshore petroleum deposits in the North Sea that Britain hopes will be its economic salvation. Alas, he may be overly optimistic.

They Had A Dream

"Jackie Robinson, forgetting for this day at least, about the silver in his hair and the age in his legs, rallied the Dodgers almost single-handedly from the coma that had gripped them the first two days of baseball's World Series. He batted and fielded and ran them to an 8-3 victory . . ."

That was one of the high points in Robinson's career. The next year, faced by the facts of age, Robinson quit the game.

In 1962 the baseball world accorded Robinson its greatest accolade by electing him to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

John Roosevelt Robinson's climb to the top began on a tenant farm in Cairo, Ga., where he was born on Jan. 31, 1919. Deserted by his father, Robinson's mother moved her brood of five children to California when Robinson was only 16 months of age.

She settled in Pasadena and worked hard at menial jobs to push her children through school.

Robinson was an excellent athlete even in his youth. He lettered in four sports — baseball, basketball, football and track — at John Muir High and did the same at Pasadena City College and at UCLA, where he was a formidable football half-back in 1940 and 1941. He quit college in his junior year to help his mother.

He played professional football briefly with the Los Angeles Bulldogs, then the war came and he served as an officer in the Army. When he was discharged in 1944, Robinson joined the Kansas City Monarchs, a professional Negro baseball team.

In 1945, Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, decided to break down the color bar in big-league baseball. He chose Robinson for the experiment.

Signed by the Montreal Royals, a Brooklyn farm club, Robinson was brought to Brooklyn two years later. At first he was confronted with racial slurs from every quarter, but he soon proved himself and opened the doors for a host of other black athletes.

Robinson, who became a successful businessman after quitting baseball, died in 1972 at the age of 51.

On With Centrum

Hopefully, the City Council has set an irrevocable course toward ultimate realization of the Centrum complex in downtown Lincoln. In deciding in favor of revenue rather than general obligation bonds for some $3.63 million of the project, the council jumped its final hurdle.

Not that no more monkey wrenches could be thrown in. They could. A lawsuit is likely on the validity of the city's classification of the property involved as blighted.

It is that classification of the block, 11th to 12th, N to O, that qualifies this revitalization project for municipal sponsorship under state law. A successful lawsuit could, again, block the project but there is no recourse here but to leave that in the hands of providence.

As far as council action is concerned, the die has been cast. The revenue-bond route avoids a vote of the people. Normally, this would bother us some but the city is rightfully entitled to pursue whatever course is legally available to it and that is the case with the revenue bonds.

Reality May Be Harsh

Americans may not be too happy in the coming year or so and it isn't likely to be the result of any political forces. The situation was summed up by a federal agricultural official visiting Nebraska this week.

Looking at corn for purposes of disaster relief payments, the official said the situation is terrible. He had viewed field after field of dry-land corn that normally produces well over 100 bushels an acre but which this year will yield from 10 bushels down to none.

He went on to explain that difficult times in the food market are ahead. What he means is that the price of food is going to go up. Additionally, the quality of some things such as beef may suffer.

For the time being, it's mostly television and the pub. Richard says he and Sally are buying more beer and less hard liquor, but that beer prices have been rising so fast that they will have to cut down their visits to the local tavern.

To save on food, Richard now spends eight hours a week tending his vegetable garden. He grows squash, beans, peas, potatoes, carrots, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower on a plot allotted him by the local council. The net saving, he calculates, is $500 a year. The family diet now centers on liver, chicken, fish fingers and eggs, all of which are cheap at present. Sally buys in bulk when possible and stores the supplies in the freezer.

What hurts the Burwells most are the rising charges for heating, electricity, the telephone, property taxes, and private school fees for the older child. Although Richard is a law-abiding citizen, he has yet to pay the first installment of his local taxes, which are 40% higher than a year ago. The installment fell due July 1, but he does not plan to pay up until Oct. 1.

The price of heating oil for the boiler the Burwells installed in 1970 has almost doubled over the past 12 months. The fuel now costs 51.1 cents a gallon, and could increase further. The telephone bills have been rising so fast that the Burwell children are now restricted in the number of calls they may make.

When all accounts are added up, the Burwells find that they must dip into their modest savings at the rate of about $250 a year simply to break even. In 1970 Richard was able to save that much, and Sally wasn't working then. "I don't think things will improve until the oil starts flowing up North," Richard predicts, referring to the offshore petroleum deposits in the North Sea that Britain hopes will be its economic salvation. Alas, he may be overly optimistic.

They Had A Dream

"Jackie Robinson, forgetting for this day at least, about the silver in his hair and the age in his legs, rallied the Dodgers almost single-handedly from the coma that had gripped them the first two days of baseball's World Series. He batted and fielded and ran them to an 8-3 victory . . ."

That was one of the high points in Robinson's career. The next year, faced by the facts of age, Robinson quit the game.

In 1962 the baseball world accorded Robinson its greatest accolade by electing him to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

John Roosevelt Robinson's climb to the top began on a tenant farm in Cairo, Ga., where he was born on Jan. 31, 1919. Deserted by his father, Robinson's mother moved her brood of five children to California when Robinson was only 16 months of age.

He settled in Pasadena and worked hard at menial jobs to push her children through school.

Robinson was an excellent athlete even in his youth. He lettered in four sports — baseball, basketball, football and track — at John Muir High and did the same at Pasadena City College and at UCLA, where he was a formidable football halfback in 1940 and 1941. He quit college in his junior year to help his mother.

He played professional football briefly with the Los Angeles Bulldogs, then the war came and he served as an officer in the Army. When he was discharged in 1944, Robinson joined the Kansas City Monarchs, a professional Negro baseball team.

In 1945, Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, decided to break down the color bar in big-league baseball. He chose Robinson for the experiment.

Signed by the Montreal Royals, a Brooklyn farm club, Robinson was brought to Brooklyn two years later. At first he was confronted with racial slurs from every quarter, but he soon proved himself and opened the doors for a host of other black athletes.

Robinson, who became a successful businessman after quitting baseball, died in 1972 at the age of 51.

Nine students who received their degrees Friday at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln received those degrees "With High Distinction," the highest academic honor conferred upon a graduating student.

One of the students, Donna Lynn Rivett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth H. Rivett, Madison, N. J., will receive the Chancellor's Scholar Award, in addition to receiving her degree "With High Distinction" with a major in computer science. The Chancellor's Scholar Award is presented to students who enter their final semester of undergraduate work with a straight "A" average.

Other students who received their degrees "With High Distinction" were:

James Douglas Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Buchanan, Beatrice, who majored in English and will teach at Lincoln Southeast High School this fall.

John Elliot Hancock, Minneapolis, Minn., who majored in architecture, and intends to further his education in architecture and eventually teach architecture.

Lynn Barbara Booz Hershey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Warren Booz, Warminster, Pa., who majored in art education, will teach art at Lincoln Southeast High School this fall.

Sandra J. Knopf, daughter of

Mrs. Doris Hergenrader, Lincoln, who majored in health education.

Thomas Norman Lawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman W. Lawson, Lincoln, who majored in accounting and intends to enter law school this fall.

Melvin Michael Mark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Murt M. Mark, Greeley, who majored in psychology and will enter Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., graduate school this fall.

Rachel Rita Peterson Mosman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin L. Peterson, Arlington, Texas, who majored in human development and the family and elementary education. She will teach in the Lincoln public schools this fall.

Martha Lynn Perrins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen R. Perrins, Cheshire, Conn., who majored in psychology.

Life Begins At Forty: Appearance Enhanced By Proper Lighting

By ROBERT PETERSON

Have you ever noticed your reflection in a mirror someplace where there was harsh overhead lighting? With the wrong kind of light a vital middle-ager can look pale, frail, and twice his age.

"Proper lighting can make life easier and more attractive after 40," says lighting consultant Jules Horton. "We're learning that the kind of lighting in our homes and offices plays a great role in preserving eyesight as well as in promoting more cheerful attitudes and higher self-esteem."

"Most people are dependent many hours each day on artificial lighting, but in too many cases lights are installed without being tailored to the situation. Light that is too bright or too weak can cause weariness, eyestrain, and actual harm."

"The esthetic factors are almost as important, because there's some truth in the saying that we feel as good as we look. Direct overhead lighting casts downward shadows on the face and gives us a ghostly, haggard look. But indirect lights that are properly shaded can eliminate most of these shadows and make us look younger and more vigorous."

"The day is coming," he prophesied, "when the average homeowner will give almost as much attention to the lighting of his home as he presently does to air-conditioning and decorating it."

Horton did not embark on his lighting career until middle age. In prior years he worked as a structural engineer for a building construction firm. But the insight which often comes with passing 40 persuaded him of great potentials in the lighting field. So he left the construction field and went to work for a lighting design office.

Later he started his own firm in New York and in ensuing years has won wide recognition for his imaginative work in lighting a wide assortment of structures, including bridges, civic centers, office buildings, homes, hospitals, and gardens both in this country and abroad.

His views on lighting came to mind the other day when I visited a rest home for infirm elders. The home was clean and well painted but there were strong ceiling lights which cast a cruel glare making patients look and feel more sick and feeble than they really were. When I mentioned it to the manager he agreed, and I'm glad to report a study is now underway to provide this home with more restful and pleasing lighting.

All of us have had the experience of seeing our reflection in assorted windows and mirrors, and finding how different we tend to look depending on the lighting. At home we usually have the lights adjusted so as to give a pleasing reflection when we pass the mirror in the hall or bathroom. But outside the home it's different. A favorite couplet on this theme was sent me years ago by Josephine C. Walker of Tampa, Fla., who wrote, "In the mirror at home I know myself well. I may be 60 but no one can tell. But a store-window glimpse and I'm shocked to see; that plump little matron with wrinkles is me."

47 Ph.D. Degrees Conferred

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln conferred doctor of philosophy degrees upon 47 graduate students at the close of the second summer session, Friday.

Students receiving their Ph.D. degrees and their areas of specialization include:

Donna L. Aksamit, Lincoln, educational psychology.

Dennis L. Albers, Jackson, Ky., physics.

William A. Anderson, Lincoln, agronomy.

John D. Brewer, Aberdeen, S.D., clinical psychology.

William H. Bulger, Arcadia, medical science.

Donald F. Cheadle, Lincoln, clinical psychology.

Beverly A. Coyle, Lincoln, English.

Carole E. Crate, Des Moines, Iowa, secondary education.

John C. Cronn, Lincoln, microbiology.

Waldemar G.W.J. deRijk, Lincoln, physics.

Allen L. Diehl, York, agronomy.

Edidiong Obong Ekpoudom, Nigeria, West Africa, finance.

Jack L. Erickson, Boelus, adult and continuing education.

Biswanath Ganguly, Calcutta, India, physics.

Ralph F. Grajeda, Omaha, English.

LeRoy L. Hass, Milwaukee, Wis., community clinical psychology.

Glen R. Heizer, Lincoln, zoology.

Richard O. Holquist, Omaha, business administration.

Richard E. Ivy, Lincoln, nutrition.

Stephen E. Jess, Lincoln, British history.

William M. Kemler, Lincoln, psychology.

Edward M. Kood Jr., Lincoln, business administration.

Robert J. Koester, Lincoln, business.

Shashikant M. Kulkarni, Bombay, India, food science and technology.

Arthur Liakus, Chicago, Ill., chemistry.

Earl E. McDowell, Bloomington, Minn., speech.

John Howard Muir, Johnstown, N.D., agronomy.

Charles P. Olander, Isleford, Maine, zoology.

Robert Reeves, McAllen, Texas, elementary education.

John M. Romisher, Lincoln, adult and continuing education.

Robert E. Roy, Matewan, W.V., clinical psychology.

John K. Scheer, Lincoln, secondary education.

Marina W. Scholz, Seward, elementary education.

Kent D. Selman, Angwin, Calif., English.

Thomas A. Severn, Kearney, economics.

James E. Specht, Lincoln, genetics.

Bisley R. Stalts, Joplin, Mo., chemistry.

Walter Allen Verdon, La Crosse, Wis., economics.

Degrees Presented At UNL

Approximately 475 baccalaureate and graduate degrees were presented to University of Nebraska-Lincoln students Friday, the final day of the second summer session.

Diplomas were distributed at a reception held for students and their parents in the Nebraska Union. Adam C. Breckenridge, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs, presided at a short program during the reception at which honors graduates were recognized.

A list of graduates and their home towns follows. If no city is given, the graduate is a Lincolnite. Those students graduating with honors are identified with either distinction (D) or high distinction (HD).

Education Degrees Awarded

Eight Doctor of Education Degrees were conferred on graduate students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln at the end of the second summer session, Friday.

Students receiving their degrees and their area of specialty:

Douglas L. Dickerson, Coraopolis, Pa., educational administration.

Tom J. Fitzgerald, Peru, secondary education.

John C. Jorgensen, Omaha, secondary education.

Duane D. Miller, Lincoln, educational administration.

Marianne K. Novotny, Lincoln, elementary education.

Harold D. Terry, Bellevue, secondary education.

Roger G. Young, New Brighton, Minn., educational administration.

Fall Semester Registration Set At UNL

General registration for the fall semester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday on the NU City Campus.

About 3,500 students are expected to enroll for classes during the three-day registration period. A large majority of students enrolled through a pre-registration program held during the spring.

According to Ted E. Pfeifer, director of registration and records, any person who has completed his admissions procedures or who attended the university last spring or summer and is in good standing may enroll through the general registration.

Registration will be conducted from 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. on all three days. Registration materials may be picked up in the Administration Building and the procedures completed in the Nebraska Union's Centennial Room.

The fall semester begins Monday, Aug. 26, and continues through Friday, Dec. 20.

Medical Group Names Colgan New Chairman

Francis Colgan of the Nebraska State Department of Education has been elected chairman of the Nebraska Regional Medical Program regional advisory group and executive committee.

Dr. Colgan, education department coordinator for research, planning and evaluation, succeeds Dr. Richard Bradley, dean of the University of Nebraska College of Dentistry.

Colgan has been an advisory group member for two years and previously served as vice chairman. Dr. Carl Cornelius, a Sidney physician, will serve as vice chairman.

Executive committee members-at-large are Dr. Robert Schalock, psychology department chairman, Hastings; Kenneth Neff, Nebraska Medical Association executive secretary, and Pauline Tyndall, Community Health Representatives director, Macy.

Since its beginning in 1967, the Nebraska Regional Medical Program goal has been to increase the availability of health care, enhance its quality and contain its costs.

When Clayton Arendt's customers speak of their paper boy, they are likely to resort to superlatives such as "he is the best carrier we've ever had" and "better service would be impossible to imagine."

A carrier salesman for The Lincoln Star for the past two years, Clayton places the papers inside his customers doors whenever possible and is always finished with his deliveries by 6:15 a.m.

This consistently excellent service coupled with a sizable increase in business volume has made him a two time winner of the Senior Carrier Award as well as providing him with enough income to purchase a 10-speed bicycle, five shares of Illinois Central stock and still keep his savings account healthy and growing.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

2nd Psalm and Acts 4:25

Christ's Sermon on the Mount is in the first part of the first book of the New Testament, Matthew, Chapters 5, 6, and 7. The following are quotations from Chapter 7:

"Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. Beware of false prophets . . .

Therefore whoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

These are the words of Christ from Luke 12:4 & 5: "And I say unto my friends, be afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, after he hath killed the body, and is able to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him."

In the following the writer is giving consideration to a letter and message recently received. The return address gives the name of one of our great Southern Colleges and Universities. Probably I am flattered by the word "mister" being prefixed to my name, and then the message in just three words: "Go to hell!" It is signed P.A.L. — Perverts Anonymous League — and then the name of the author, and title, President.

It appears he is one of the officials of The Bad World. Hell, and president of one of its civil societies. Is this an invitation to visit, or maybe a command from an official?

This communication calls to mind a historical incident. The following epistle was ascribed to a pious monk, and addressed to Clement VI. and his Cardinals in the name of Lucifer, Prince of Darkness. It was signed by Beelzebub, your special friend. Farfarellus and Catabriga, Secretary, and was dated from "the center of the earth and the place of darkness."

"We yield you hearty thanks," it commences, "persevere, and by your precious assistance we will soon have conquered the whole world (whole world: ecumenism!). However, to second your effort we send you from here some of our most skilled satraps, who, admitted to our councils will work to assure you the victory. Powerful and adroit as you are, please not to negotiate an appearance of peace between the kings of the earth, doing all you can at the same time to divide and destroy them. We recommend you also our very dear daughters, Pride, Avarice, Fraud, Luxury and others, but above all Dame Simony who gave you to the world and has nourished you with her milk."

Mr. President of P.A.L. the writer refuses and rejects your invitation or command to go to hell, and advises you in God's Name to turn your face and attention away from the eternal curse unto The Savior, "THE MIGHTY TO SAVE!" Also, turn your love and affection away from Lucifer's dear daughters and Dame Simony. (Simony is the "act or crime of buying or selling ecclesiastical preferment; traffic in anything sacred.")

Dante saw a man in hell who was still alive on earth. The "shade" explained that when a man reaches such a depth of guilt as he did, his soul was carried down to hell even before his death, and a demon takes possession of his body and animates it on earth until its time has run its course — a demon has taken its place in a body that "walks, and sleeps, and drinks, and puts on clothes!"

"BUT SEEK YE FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD, AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS AND ALL THESE THINGS SHALL BE ADDED UNTO YOU — See Matthew 6:33.

Farewell Mr. President of P.A.L. Hope you can join the Apostle Peter in Repenting and saying with him to Christ: "Lord, wash not my feet only, but also my hands and my head."

John 13:9

Nine Students Receive Highest Honor

Nine students who received their degrees Friday at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln received those degrees "With High Distinction," the highest academic honor conferred upon a graduating student.

One of the students, Donna Lynn Rivett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth H. Rivett, Madison, N.J., will receive the Chancellor's Scholar Award, in addition to receiving her degree "With High Distinction" with a major in computer science. The Chancellor's Scholar Award is presented to students who enter their final semester of undergraduate work with a straight "A" average.

Other students who received their degrees "With High Distinction" were:

James Douglas Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Buchanan, Beatrice, who majored in English and will teach at Lincoln East High School this fall.

John Elliot Hancock, Minneapolis, Minn., who majored in architecture, and intends to further his education in architecture and eventually teach architecture.

Lynn Barbara Booz Hershey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Warren Booz, Warminster, Pa., who majored in art education, will teach art at Lincoln Southeast High School this fall.

Sandra J. Knopf, daughter of

Mrs. Doris Hergenrader, Lincoln, who majored in health education.

Thomas Norman Lawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman W. Lawson, Lincoln, who majored in accounting and intends to enter law school this fall.

Melvin Michael Mark, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Mark, Greeley, who majored in psychology and will enter Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., graduate school this fall.

Rachel Rita Peterson Moseman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin L. Peterson, Arlington, Texas, who majored in human development and the family and elementary education. She will teach in the Lincoln public schools this fall.

Martha Lynn Perrins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen R. Perrins, Cheshire, Conn., who majored in psychology.

Degrees Presented At UNL

Approximately 475 baccalaureate and graduate degrees were presented to University of Nebraska-Lincoln students Friday, the final day of the second summer session.

Diplomas were distributed at a reception held for students and their parents in the Nebraska Union. Adam C. Breckenridge, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs, presided at a short program during the reception at which honors graduates were recognized.

A list of graduates and their home towns follows. If no city is given, the graduate is a Lincolnite. Those students graduating with honors are identified with either distinction (D) or high distinction (HD).

It's Often Not Enough

Frequently, the 'damage deposit' paid by a new apartment resident is not sufficient to cover the repair and cleaning bills incurred as a result of his or her tenancy.

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Everyone has been in the apartment or house hunting situation. And if you are living on a limited budget with other monthly commitments, you know how difficult it is to come up with a deposit in addition to that first month's rent.

Nevertheless, "collecting deposits is a nationwide custom," said Richard Burke, executive director of the Lincoln Housing Authority.

Local property owners and managers contend that damage deposits make it possible for them to operate profitably. And yet, in spite of the deposit, many times the prepaid amount is not substantial enough to pay for damage incurred.

Of course, tenants are not charged for "fair wear and tear," rental owners and managers agree. Most often, only part of the deposit is retained for common incidents such as glass breakage, screen destruction, door repairs and stain removal from carpets.

More than covering actual damage, the deposit helps insure that the tenant will keep the place clean, said Dan Cuda, part owner of Village Manor Realty Co.

All too often, tenants feel that cleaning their apartment before moving is not worth their while, the agencies report. But it means a money loss to the renter, who according to standard management procedures, is charged for the cleaning fee.

And justifiably so, as Forest Michals of the Nebraska Real Estate Corp. sees it. "Quite frankly, no one wants to move into someone else's filth."

"We make a detailed inspection of the premises and its condition when a tenant moves in and when he moves out," explained Burke. "And we expect the tenant to return the complex to us ready to rent."

Reflecting basic standards for most agencies, Michals noted that the Nebraska Real Estate Corporation requires $60 to $100 deposits, "depending on the rental and whether or not it is furnished."

"I would guess that we retain all or part, generally part, of the deposit 10% to 15% of the time," he added.

However, through their experiences in the property rental and leasing business, personnel at the Village Manor Realty Co. indicated that often the amount of the deposit will determine whether or not any damage will be done.

"It seems to make a world of difference in the extent of damage," said Cuda. "The $25 to $50 deposit does not have as much effect as one-half month's rent deposit, because there is more money involved."

According to Cuda and his business partner, Doug Earnhart, serious damage accounts for less than 5% of the cases.

"If there is good management, real severe damage doesn't occur very often," Cuda explained.

"It (severe damage) is more vandalism than wear and tear," Earnhart pointed out.

To alleviate overhead costs for damage repairs, the various agencies resort to different methods of dealing with damage when it exceeds the initial deposit payment.

"It is hard to enforce any type of recourse," Michals noted. "It (damage) is just an occupational hazard of our trade."

"In most cases, it is just a matter of tightening our belts and taking it on the chin."

"If there is excessive damage, we try to negotiate with the tenant," said Burke. "But if he refuses to assume the responsibility, we just turn it over to our collection agency."

"Sometimes, when there is damage, the tenant doesn't even ask for the deposit, he just moves," Cuda related. But if there is a question regarding damages and retained deposits, "we just sit down and work out an agreement with the tenant.

"In one case, the tenant did the repairs himself."

"And, if necessary, we will call our attorney asking him to write a letter asking for a settlement," Cuda added. "Or, as in a recent case, we'll file a suit with the small claims court."

As an example of severe damage and its cost, Cuda offered an itemized list of damages submitted to the small claims court, which resulted in a $481.50 settlement.

The list included $145 in lost rent, $45 in general clean-up, $65 for carpet replacement, $30 in window repair, $21.50 for new drapes and curtain rod, $15 in door and lock repairs, $106 for wall repairs and repapering, $30 for carpet and stove cleaning and $25 for repainting.

"This does not include damages to furniture in the apartment, such as a broken couch and burns in two tables," Cuda said. "We did all the repair work ourselves. If we would have hired someone, it would have cost us $1,000."

"It is excessively expensive," Burke concurred. "There is an economic framework in which we must exist (Lincoln Housing Authority is a federally subsidized housing project). So, when there are large damages, it deprives other deserving people in the community of a place to live, because it inflates our rate of operation."

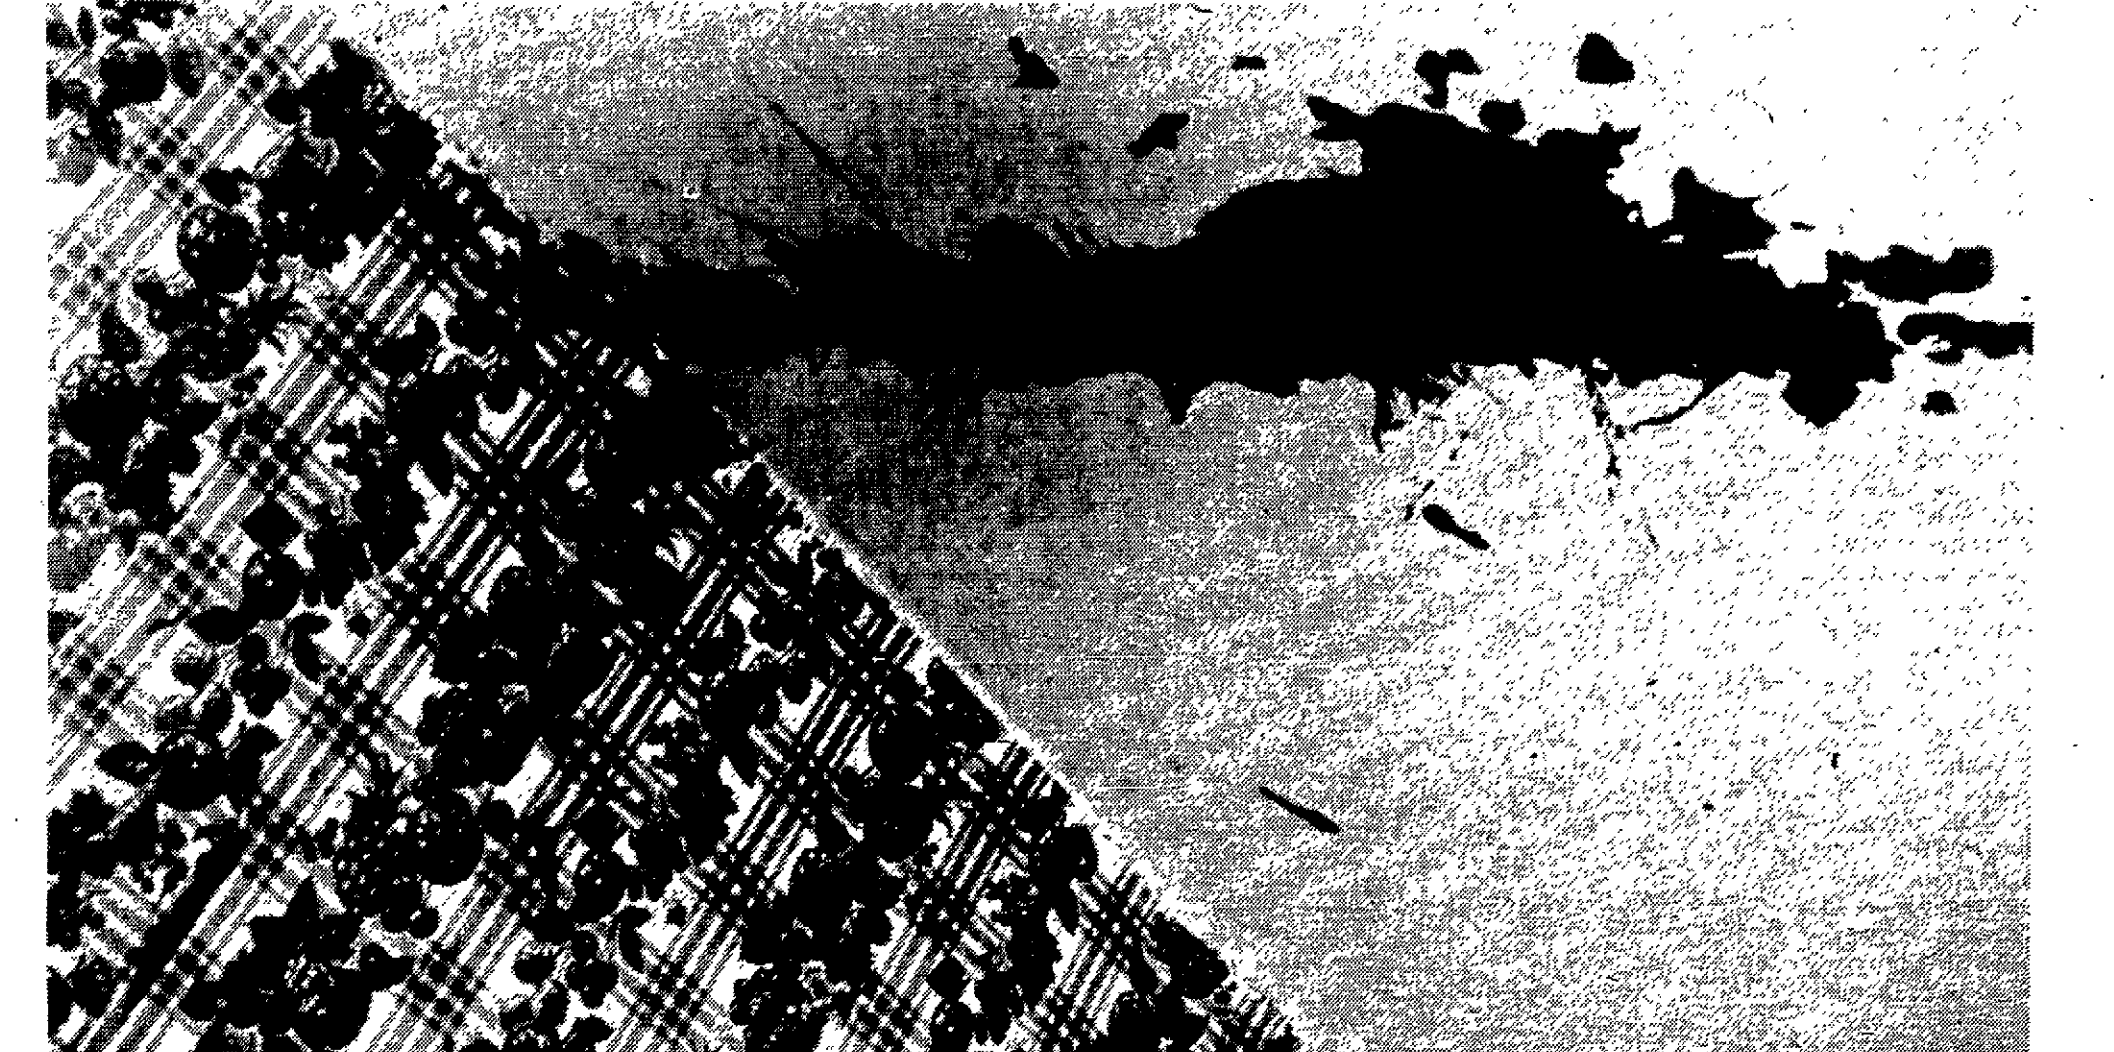

"But you have to stop and analyze each situation," Cuda continued. "If a couple lived in one of our apartments for a few years and there was minimal damage, I might just write it off."

"On the other hand though, we have actually had renters improve the property," Earnhart interjected.

"That's right. We sometimes have a tendency to remember the bad tenants and forget the good ones," Cuda acknowledged, adding, "We believe in rental property and have faith in renters."

DISORDER AND FILTH . . . as left by moving tenant too "busy" to stop and clean.

FOOD STAINS . . . on the kitchen ceiling and wall of this vacated apartment required not only cleaning but a new paint job.

State Women's Political Caucus To Hold Convention In Lincoln

"Win With Women in '74" will be the rallying cry when members of the Nebraska Women's Political Caucus meet Friday, Aug. 23, at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education for their state convention.

Mary O'Halloran, a member of the Iowa House of Representatives, will be the keynote speaker. She is a native of Ord.

Delegates to the convention will plan the group's strategy for 1974-75 and consider resolutions on a number of issues. A state steering committee and slate of new officers also will be elected during the conventions.

During the afternoon, delegates will attend workshops on elections and candidates, legislative priorities, organizing and motivating women and identifying community issues.

Further information may be obtained from Jean O'Hara, state cochairperson, at 466-2452.

Increases In Cattle Prices Reflected At Supermarket

Retail beef prices in 19 cities averaged 11 cents higher Aug. 8 than they did the month before, according to statistics compiled by the American National Cattlemen's Association (ANCA).

The prices, however, still were below the highs reached in February.

The association's survey was based on the prices of five representative beef cuts — ground beef, round steak, sirloin steak, T-bone steak and chuck roast — in three food chains.

Average beef prices in Omaha stores were the fourth highest in the nation — outranked only by Baltimore, Portland and Washington, D. C. — and exceeded the national average by 13 cents per pound: $1.52 was the national average while beef cost an average of $1.65 in Omaha.

"Ground beef and chuck roast prices in the 19 cities rose an average of 6 to 8 cents per pound," said Gordon Van Vleck, ANCA president. "In line with seasonal patterns, prices of round, sirloin and T-bone steak rose somewhat more — by 9 to 15 cents per pound."

The price increases since July, he explained, reflect increases in slaughter cattle and wholesale beef prices.

Van Vleck pointed to production and marketing disruptions resulting from the 1973 price control program and inflated costs as reasons for the cattle market instability and reduced number of cattle being fed.

Retail beef prices may continue near or above recent averages for some time, he predicted, citing this summer's drought as having helped push current and prospective feed costs to extremely high levels.

Dear Abby Don't Expect Zoo To Bail You Out

DEAR ABBY: An anthropologist wrote to you recently, advocating the rearing of chimpanzees instead of children. He stated that one can always sell a mature, healthy chimp to a zoo when it became hard to handle (and at twice what he paid for it), and facetiously went on to ask what zoo would take a human? Herein lies a serious misconception.

The zoos DO NOT want these former pets! Lately, since exotic pets have become fashionable, zoos around the country have been swamped with "offers" to take chimps, ocelots, cheetahs, birds, fowl, lizards, etc. off the hands of those who had no idea what they were getting into when they purchased the young creatures.

These cast-offs are usually refused because former pets make poor zoo specimens. Their health may be suspect, their behavior neurotic, or they may be simply unable to cope with their new environment. Then, too, zoos have better sources of supply — their own breeding programs, for example.

So the buyer of such a pet must acknowledge the fact that he'll have to keep it for its lifetime. It's either that, or return it to a wild state in which can no longer survive, try to find a shelter that'll accept it, or easy way out — have it "troyed."

Abby, please appeal to self-styled animal lovers, or status seekers, to resist buying a wild animal unless they are prepared to learn how to raise it and give it a good life. Otherwise, the animal suffers, the environment suffers, and so does the owner. They shouldn't buy it and then expect the zoo to bail them out after the novelty has worn off. That's not what zoos are for. Instead, suggest they write to The Fund For Animals, 140 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for free information on exotic pets.

GEORGE TAYLOR

DEAR GEORGE: Thanks for speaking for our furred and feathered friends who can't speak for themselves.

DEAR ABBY: If you were elected President of the United States, what is the first thing you'd do?

DEAR FAN: The same as Clare Boothe Luce. I'd ask for a recount!

DEAR ABBY: My 55-year-old wife (in name only for the last 10 years) and I are having a disagreement, and want you to settle it.

My wife telephoned a local dinner and dance spot and reserved a table for two near the orchestra on a Saturday night. This was confirmed, but when she and her friend (a widow) showed up, they were told there were no tables available in the room with the orchestra. She argued that she had reservations, but to no avail. They were seated in another room, away from the orchestra and dance floor.

When my wife asked me why I thought she and her friend were treated this way, I said: "If two unescorted women dine together, it could give the place a bad name, because the women could be (1) Lesbians, or (2) looking to pick up men."

Do you think I was wrong in my evaluation?

THE MALE VIEW

DEAR MALE: Your "evaluation" is not necessarily correct. But whether or not a public dining and dancing establishment can lawfully discriminate against women without male escorts is another matter. If two women elect to dine together, whom are they hurting?

DEAR ABBY: I hate showers! I am 27 years old, and didn't use to feel this way, but enough is enough. Lately I have been invited to showers for girls I hardly know, some of whom I haven't seen since I got out of high school.

Opening presents in front of everyone to publicize how generous" (or "cheap") the donors are rubs me the wrong way.

I was married (two years ago) and refused when my friends offered to have a shower for me. I had a planned elopement and didn't soak one person for a present.

I have been told that if you're invited to a shower, you must send a gift whether you come or not. How does one courteously reply to a nifty shower invitation for someone she hasn't seen in nine years?

Please answer in your column, Abby, I'm sure I'm not the only one with this problem.

SICK OF SHOWERS

DEAR SICK: There is no "law" which compels you to send a gift if you decline a shower invitation. Simply decline, and don't feel obligated to give a present to someone you "hardly know" or haven't seen in nine years.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22, single and fairly attractive. I don't have to elaborate on how difficult it is for a young lady to find a respectable, intelligent, employed, single man these days.

The problem is, I seem to have found one, but he is seeing another girl.

He has dated me a few times, but I feel so guilty about the other girl, Abby, I don't want to be the cause of their breaking up.

Should I continue to see him? Or should I drop the whole thing before it gets started?

LOST

DEAR LOST: If he wants to break off with the other girl, theirs couldn't be much of a love match. Since you didn't deliberately set out to lure him away, there is no reason to feel guilty. If you wait for a man who is not seeing anyone, you could wait a long time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THOSE READERS WHO CHARGED ME WITH CONSULTING A DOZEN EXPERTS INSTEAD OF A DICTIONARY TO LEARN THE DEFINITION OF THE WORD "nescience."

When I came upon the word, whose meaning I did not know, I immediately got out my hernia edition of Webster's New International Dictionary, and looked it up.

I then telephoned a dozen erudite friends, NOT TO LEARN WHAT THE WORD MEANT, BUT TO ASK IF THEY HAD EVER HEARD OF IT.

All were nescient! But after admitting their nescience, each one reached for his dictionary, and looked up the word while still on the telephone.

Am I vindicated?

LES Wants Plan With Teeth

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Electric System (LES) administrative board Friday empowered a subcommittee to draw up an energy conservation plan which, if adopted, would have teeth.

The board directed the Power Supply Committee to gather information and give recommendations to the board in October. The committee could ask that some proposals be put into law by the City Council.

One would set minimum thermal insulation standards in the construction of homes, offices and other structures.

LES has been advocating regulations, but no changes in the city building code have been made to set such standards.

LES' officials estimate that more than 50% of the heating energy and 30% of energy used for air conditioning could be saved on an insulated house compared to a house without insulation.

Insulation Suggestions

LES recommends that there be a minimum of six inches of insulation in the ceiling and three and one-half inches in walls and flooring. The utility also recommends the use of double-glass windows and weather stripping of doors and windows.

Board member Nick Bashara raised the question of LES's role in promoting conservation of electricity, stating, "There is a definite amount of hydrocarbons available."

"Regardless of the time scale you put on it, the (energy) crunch is going to come," he said.

Bashara acknowledged that while the electricity user who does not insulate his home will have to pay a higher bill, that means LES has to build a larger plant to supply that user with additional energy.

Need Broad Effort

Board Chairman John Haessler commented, "To really do a job of it, we must have a much broader effort." He cited promotion of mass transit as one example.

Board member Betty McClen-don urged that city and county officials be brought into the conservation planning efforts during the early stages so LES will be assured of cooperation down the road.

The board set a 60-day deadline for presentation of the committee's recommendations.

In other action the board signed a two-year labor contract with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 1536.

9% Wage Hike

That contract calls for a 9% wage hike this year and a 6% hike next year. The board agreed, however, to increase next year's pay hike if the cost of living index exceeds 7%.

The board also agreed to Administrator Walt Canney's recommendation to award all supervisory personnel a 5% merit raise.

The board authorized an expenditure of up to $65,000 to hire an investment banking firm to prepare a financial study for LES.

NPPD Lawsuit

Board member Tom Allman reported his committee still is negotiating with a Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) committee in an attempt to reach accord on a number of disputes between the two utilities.

LES and NPPD currently are involved in two lawsuits. One is aimed at forcing LES to pay power bills which NPPD claims LES owes them. The second action deals with a power agreement between the utilities, which LES wants declared invalid.

LES attorney Norm Krivosah said he hopes the cases will be tried and settled in district court this fall.

How embarrassing to recognize a person's face but be unable to recall his name! It happens to most of us occasionally.

God always knows us. His eye is always open to see us. His ear is always open to hear us. We can enjoy His acquaintance daily.

We can enjoy the Presence of God in a special way when we attend church. When we turn our attention fully upon Him, when we elevate our thinking to those matters which hold eternal value, God speaks in the warmest of tones.

Yes, God knows us. He calls us by name. He never forgets.

DAC Puts Off Hiring Aide

Despite what some members called an emergency, Lincoln's Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) Friday postponed action on hiring a staff member to aid in implementing the downtown redevelopment plan.

The proposed assistant would aid the growing number of DAC task forces being formed to oversee various aspects of the plan.

Consultants Barton-Aschman recommended hiring the assistant and proposed that the person be paid by the Lincoln Center Development Association (LCDA). No salary was recommended.

Report To Both

Barton-Aschman also recommended that the assistant report both to DAC and to LCDA Director Lanny Jorgenson, a

DAC staff member.

Board member Barb Henderson objected to the financial arrangement and called for the assistant to be directly responsible to by DAC. She said she could see some conflicts arising if the assistant were responsible to several different organizations.

Other DAC members suggested, from an administrative standpoint, it would be better for the assistant to be an LCDA employee, since he then would receive fringe benefits.

Chairman Dick White said DAC had no source of income to hire an assistant. Any DAC bills have been paid for by LCDA, which allocates funds to the City Council appointed committee. The city picked up the $89,000 price tag for the study.

Although Community Development Director Leo Scherer reminded the group there is "some urgency to put this staff on," the committee delayed action one week.

In other business Amen, chairman of the 13th street task force reported that almost 50% of the property owners along 13th have signed petitions calling for that thoroughfare to be beautified under DAC and City adopted plans.

Plans call for installation of ornamental lighting, landscaping and street sculpture along 13th from J to R.

Idea Opposed

Amen told his DAC colleagues his committee has been encountering some opposition to the plans from property owners in the blocks from K to L. Some property owners apparently object to being assessed the entire cost for the improvements.

Chief Carroll To Receive J. Edgar Hoover Award

Lincoln Police Chief Joseph T. Carroll will be sharing the awards platform with President Gerald Ford and Chicago Mayor Richard Daly in Chicago Monday when he picks up his J. Edgar Hoover "gold medal award" of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

President Ford — listed as vice-president on the program — will receive the "citizenship gold medal," while the "Americanism award" will be granted to Mayor Daly.

Carroll said that President Ford is expected to make his first public appearance since he became President at this opening session of the 75th VFW national convention.

He said the three award recipients will be seated at a head table of distinguished guests at a banquet Monday evening.

Carroll, 64, has been chief of the department for 34 years. With the medal comes a $1,000 cash grant which may be used in whatever way Carroll determines is in the interest of law enforcement.

Joseph Carroll

Among previous recipients were FBI Director Clarence A. Kelley, who was presented the medal as chief of police in Kansas City, Mo., and former Police Commissioner Frank Rizzo of Philadelphia.

LT&T, Workers Ink 38-Month Accord

Agreement on a new 38-month contract was reached early Friday by Local 7470 of the Communications Workers of America and the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The tentative pact provides for first-year wage increases ranging from $6.50 to $23.50 weekly, depending on an individual's placement within the firm.

Weekly wage increases in 1975 and 1976 also are called for. Other terms of the contract include improvements in the health care plan, holiday schedules and pensions; an additional holiday; revisions in certain wage classifications; and cost-of-living adjustments based upon the consumer price index.

The pact, which affects about 1,500 workers, goes into effect immediately. Some benefits will be retroactive to Aug. 2. Negotiations between the two sides had been in progress since June 12.

First Aid Kits, Splints Donated To Firemen

The Lincoln Fire Department has received some non-budget equipment such as first aid kits and air splints as a result of a contest sponsored by the Security Mutual Life of Nebraska.

Security Mutual sponsored the contest, in which its agencies could win money to be donated to a local charity, in celebration of its reaching $1 billion of insurance in force.

Members of the Don Leising Agency won more than $500, then donated it to the Fire Department. Each engine company of the department received more first aid kits, "choke-savers," cervical collars and air splints.

Unused funds were applied toward the purchase of a basket stretcher for the Fire Department's rescue unit.

Johannesen Appointed New Commissioner

Gov. J. James Exon appointed E. W. Johannesen of North Platte to the Real Estate Commission.

Johannesen will succeed James D. Murphy of Lexington whose term expires.

Exon also appointed Wesley Hansen of North Platte to the Brand Committee. Hansen succeeds George Shadbolt of Merriman whose term expires.

LES Wants Plan With Teeth

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Electric System (LES) administrative board Friday empowered a subcommittee to draw up an energy conservation plan which, if adopted, would have teeth.

The board directed the Power Supply Committee to gather information and give recommendations to the board in October. The committee could ask that some proposals be put into law by the City Council.

One would set minimum thermal insulation standards in the construction of homes, offices and other structures.

LES has been advocating regulations, but no changes in the city building code have been made to set such standards.

LES officials estimate that more than 50% of the heating energy and 30% of energy used for air conditioning could be saved on an insulated house compared to a house without insulation.

Insulation Suggestions

LES recommends that there be a minimum of six inches of insulation in the ceiling and three and one-half inches in walls and flooring. The Utility also recommends the use of double-glass windows and weather stripping of doors and windows.

Board member Nick Bashara raised the question of LES's role in promoting conservation of electricity, stating, "There is a definite amount of hydrocarbons available."

"Regardless of the time scale you put on it, the (energy) crunch is going to come," he said.

Bashara acknowledged that while the electricity user who does not insulate his home will have to pay a higher bill, that means LES has to build a larger plant to supply that user with additional energy.

Need Broad Effort

Board Chairman John Haessler commented, "To really do a job of it, we must have a much broader effort." He cited promotion of mass transit as one example.

Board member Betty McClen-don urged that city and county officials be brought into the conservation planning efforts during the early stages so LES will be assured of cooperation down the road.

That contract calls for a 9% wage hike this year and a 6% hike next year. The board agreed, however, to increase next year's pay hike if the cost of living index exceeds 7%.

The board also agreed to Administrator Walt Canney's recommendation to award all supervisory personnel a 5% merit raise.

Car-Bicycle Accident Injures Lincoln Girl, 11

An 11-year-old Lincoln girl was hospitalized for shock Thursday night after she was injured in a car-bicycle accident, police said.

Police said Linda Shepard, 922 N. 29th, was eastbound on Fair between 28th and 29th Sts. when her bicycle was in collision with a westbound car driven by Robert L. Wailes, 36, Hastings.

The girl was reported in "good" condition at Lincoln General Hospital Friday.

UNL Receives NASA Grant For Resource Studies

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln has received more than $100,000 from NASA this year to continue study of natural resources management via data obtained from an orbiting satellite.

During the past three years, the remote sensing project coordinated by Dr. James V. Drew, dean of graduate studies at UNL, has been granted more than $300,000 and has produced information for land use and energy use planning.

"Concerns about land use and energy use policies are high but at the same time are sensitive, and it is difficult to make substantial headway in finding solutions," Drew points out.

Gathers Needed Facts

"A critical part of developing these policies is to have an inventory of facts about land use. ERTS (Earth Resources Technology Satellite) provides us with a rapid means we have never had before of gathering facts that will be needed by citizen groups and government in making policy decisions."

Among the first applications of ERTS data was the production of a map of Nebraska showing land use. The Remote Sensing Center in the Conservation and Survey Division headed by Dr. Marvin Carlson also used ERTS data in constructing a land use map of Lancaster County.

"An example of ERTS application to energy consumption planning can probably best be illustrated in the field of agriculture," Drew says.

Irrigation Energy User

"Irrigation is a big user of energy in this state, so it is important that we anticipate fuel needs."

"For example, 1972 ERTS pictures of Box Butte County showed 54 center pivot irrigation systems in operation, while by 1973 our data indicated that this number has jumped to 116. So you can see that this type of monitoring can help us reach a more accurate forecast as to the amount of fuel that will be required for a season. It also helps us in judging the demand being placed on water resources in a given area and suggests water management practices that may need to be considered," Drew explained.

Dr. Paul M. Seever of the agronomy department has developed means of estimating the density of vegetation covering the Nebraska Sand Hills and thus can more accurately advise range management people about stocking rates and forage available across this vast area of our state.

Water Quality Studies

Dr. Gary L. Hergenrader of the School of Life Sciences is studying the quality of water in Nebraska reservoirs through satellite produced data.

Local Educators Supply 'Midas Touch'—Trotter

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Assistant U.S. Secretary for Education Virginia Y. Trotter said in Lincoln Friday learning institutions must work to provide "equal access" to every person, regardless of age or sex.

The No. 2 education official in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said government must assume a strong but not "all-encompassing role" in education.

Virginia Trotter

State and local units must supply the initiative, "the Midas touch," for improvements, working with federal officials to prevent "stifling the educational process," she said.

Commissioner's Day

Dr. Trotter addressed about 260 Nebraska school administrators at the third annual Commissioner's Day. She took her Washington position this year after serving as vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The elementary and secondary education bill President Ford is expected to sign next week should make government "more responsive" to the country's educational needs, Trotter said.

The bill (HR69), supported by the National Education Association, will "strengthen the quality of education with equal opportunity for all Americans," she said.

Aids Minority Students

Specifically, she said, the bill will aid minority students whose second language is English, gifted students and the handicapped. It will also provide the State University of Nebraska (SUN), which this fall will begin offering multi-media college courses in the home. SUN developed its two pilot courses according to a survey of Nebraskans' learning desires.

There is "a growing awareness" that "formal education is not something that must be completed in one block before entering a career," Trotter said, "and that is good."

Institutions must respond to continuing education needs for those who desire career changes and training, she said, and must be "more sensitive to the challenge of intercultural understanding."

Traditions Foster Inertia

Declaring that traditions which foster inertia must be uprooted, she pledged not to resist change in education "to guarantee people participation in every program at any level for which they are capable."

"One of the most exciting revolutions of our time," Trotter said, is the Title 9 provision to the 1972 education amendments, providing equal educational opportunity for women.

Title 9 will "affect every level of education" for women of all ages, Trotter said, but added, "Legislation in itself is not enough."

Few Women Administrators

"Each one of you has a chance to make an impact on the old stereotypes" in education, she told the administrators, only a few of whom were women.

Trotter commended Nebraska Education Commissioner Cecil Stanley, who will retire this year, for his service to the state.

Among the more than 30 young women representing their home states in the sixth annual Miss Dogpatch U.S.A. Pageant underway this week at the Twin Parks in the Arkansas Ozark area is Lu Ann Tichy of Wilber, Neb., second from right. She is

Schwartzkopf Ends City Water Rationing

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf lifted the water rationing plan Friday which was imposed during the height of the drought last month.

The mayor said he removed the watering restrictions due to recent rains, more than two inches this week.

Under the plan which was implemented July 20, persons whose addresses ended in an odd number could water their lawns on odd-numbered days, and those with an even number could water on the even-numbered day of the week.

Violation of that edict resulted first in warnings from water system personnel, building inspectors and police officers. Repeated violators got their water disconnected.

Schwartzkopf said 14 people had their water disconnected during the time the emergency was declared. Violators were forced to pay a $2 fee to the city treasurer and post a $100 bond. The mayor said Friday that violators can now pick up their bond at the clerk's office.

15 Bennet Area Burglary Cases Now Cleared Up

Fifteen burglaries and larcenies have been cleared up in the Bennet area with the apprehension of four 14 and 15-year old boys, Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Joe Splichal reported Friday.

Splichal said the boys, all from the Bennet area, were released to the custody of their parents. He declined to release their identities pending further investigation.

Splichal said the burglaries and larcenies all occurred in the Bennet area. About $500 of goods, "clothes and everything," had been stolen, he said, and all of it was recovered.

All the offenses occurred during the last two months, Splichal said, with the last four occurring Monday night.

Omaha Man Has Breast Operation

Omaha (AP) — Physicians throughout the nation can read this month about an Omaha man who underwent surgery for breast cancer.

The case history of Edwin Minkin appears in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The authors of the article are Dr. Henry T. Lynch, chairman of the department of preventive medicine and public health at Creighton University; Arnold T. Kaplan, a former associate, and Mrs. Lynch, a registered nurse.

Minkin is not named in the article, but has indicated that his attitude toward publicity has not changed "in the hope that it will save even one life."

Minkin, 55, is a wholesale wig salesman.

He discovered a lump on his left side in 1972.

Physicians first thought the lump to be fatty tissue, but tests produced a diagnosis of cancer.

Prasch Says Superintendents Need 'More Cohesive Voice'

"Superintendents need to speak with a more cohesive voice" on current state and local educational issues, Lincoln Public Schools Supt. John Prasch said Friday.

"A lot of educational decisions are being made without our serious input," he told about 260 Nebraska school administrators attending the third annual Commissioner's Day.

Prasch urged superintendents to "aggressively seek to be heard," and to "see ourselves as leaders on a broad front" beyond kindergarten through 12th grade.

Participation Needed

School executives should participate in community planning and funding measures for educational needs, said Prasch, president-elect of the Nebraska Council of School Administrators, superintendents' section.

He cited as an example the "search for any statewide leadership" which is negligible on LB772, the controversial state aid to education bill that Friday drew a lawsuit over a November referendum ballot on it.

If the bill gets to the polls, Prasch said "its passage will depend upon what superintendents do in their own communities" in a grass-roots educational effort.

'Traditional Aloofness'

In asserting their leadership, Prasch said perhaps the superintendents ought to abandon "traditional aloofness to the party politics."

He said school administrators must recognize that "the labor-management model is the way we're going to deal with our teacher associations" for contract agreements.

Prasch said the Nebraska Department of Education (NDE) and Commissioner Cecil Stanley have "done a great deal to foster two-way dialogue."

Opinions Polarized

Meanwhile, he said, both NDE and educators must get the issues to the people, who are polarized in their opinions and using "more hostile ways to get their wishes."

Prasch said local superintendents must "reexamine our role with the State Department of Education" and support the improvement of its staff salaries to retain leadership and expertise.

Although a good instructional program should be the goal of all schools, it will "not (be) enough to maintain the kind of support we need for all kinds of human needs," Prasch said.

More Forage Available

Although the recent rains were too late to put any grain on Nebraska's corn, they have considerably boosted the tonnage of forage that will be available for cattle feed.

That's the consensus of the Nebraska Grain Marketing and Utilization Committee, a group of representatives from agribusiness, agriculture, state agencies, and the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Members of the committee, who met in Lincoln this week, agreed that many areas of Nebraska will have corn grow to maturity with less than 10 bushels of corn per acre — too little to harvest for grain. However, the corn plants will make excellent silage for cattle.

Committee member Paul Guyer, NU Extension beef specialist, commented, "Since it has rained, attitudes have gone from thoughts of liquidating or severely culling cow herds to finding the best ways to feed all this forage."

Although the rain and cool weather came too late for corn, Guyer noted that milo in eastern Nebraska responded quickly and has begun popping heads.

"It looks like it will produce several bushels of grain per acre if frost doesn't come early."

"In order to salvage the corn crop as cattle feed, we may have to move the cows some distance to where the feed is," he explained. "All the crop will make good cow feed standing in the field. Or it can be put in the silo at less than 70 or 75% moisture."

5-Inch Rain Reported In Eastern Nebraska

For the second straight day, portions of eastern Nebraska Friday received heavy rains — up to 5.00 inches at Rulo in the extreme southeastern part of the state.

Except for some overflow in the lowlands, no flooding occurred in the Rulo area, according to the Richardson County Sheriff's Office, with practically all of the moisture soaking into the soil.

Thursday's heaviest rains, too, occurred in Richardson County as Stella recorded 6.35 inches of precipitation.

Other downpours Friday included 3.40 inches at Nebraska City, 3.12 at Waterloo, 3.00 at Beaver Crossing, 2.75 at Washington, 2.57 at Weeping Water, 2.50 at Ithaca and Davey, 2.46 at Malcolm, 2.38 at Auburn and 2.30 at Boys Town.

Funnel clouds were spotted Friday in the northeastern community of Scribner where strong winds downed trees and branches.

Hot, Dry July Verified

Meanwhile, a climatic summary of July, 1974, in Nebraska released Friday from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Conservation and Survey Division verifies that July was indeed a hot, dry month in the state.

"Most reporting stations, except those in the Panhandle division, recorded 25 or more days with temperatures of 90 degrees or above," the summary said. "Sites along the southern border of the state and in the east central and southeast divisions had temperatures of 100 degrees or above on 15 to 20 days."

The highest reported for the month was 112 degrees at Fairbury on July 21, while the lowest was 36 degrees at Agate in western Nebraska on July 4.

Since 1931, when records were first compiled on the present divisional basis, the month of July, 1974, ranks as the second driest in the southeast, east central, north central and northeast divisions of Nebraska.

Duncan Robbery Suspects Sought

Two male suspects were being sought Friday afternoon in connection with the strongarm robbery of a store in Duncan, the State Patrol in Norfolk said.

The patrol said two men, both about 19 years old, tied up the proprietor of the store before the robbery was committed.

The two men then fled in a car, the patrol said. It was not immediately known what was taken.

The patrol described one man as about six feet tall with blonde hair. The other was described as about five feet eight.

Lincolnite Dies Of Bullet Wound

A Lincoln man died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to his head late Friday afternoon, according to deputy sheriff Lt. Mel Green.

Green said Kirby Lehman, 21, of 2220 No. 61st, was found in his bedroom by his mother when she returned home.

Crash Victims Raise Toll Of State Traffic Fatalities

By The Associated Press

A South Sioux City woman died Thursday in a one-vehicle crash near Waterbury, and Omaha officials Friday issued a report saying the death of an Omaha man earlier this month will also be considered a traffic fatality.

The two deaths raised the state's 1974 traffic toll to 237, compared with 249 on this date last year.

Diane Matson, 30, died when the pickup truck she was riding in went out of control and left a county road about two miles southwest of Waterbury.

The driver of the truck, Robert Cramer, 19, of Waterbury, escaped with minor injuries.

In Omaha, a coroner's report said Lawrence Stewart, 62, died Aug. 6, two days after being involved in an automobile accident.

Police said Stewart's car went out of control and hit a utility pole.

Fluoridation Goes On Crete Ballot

Crete — Whether or not Crete's water supply will be fluoridated will be decided by voters at the November general election. The issue was placed on the ballot via petitions. City Clerk Glen Baker reported to the City Council meeting that 465 qualified signatures were included on the petitions, compared to a necessary 258 signers.

Exon, Scheig To Address Group

Seward — Gov. J. James Exon and Henry F. Scheig, president of Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL), will be featured speakers at the annual convention of the Nebraska Federation of AAL Local Branches here Sunday. They will address the federation's annual business meeting on the campus at Concordia Teachers College during the final session of the three-day gathering. Dale Pinnit of Norfolk serves as president of the Nebraska AAL Federation.

Prices Down For Regular Gas

Omaha (AP) — Regular gasoline prices dropped two-tenths of a cent per gallon in Nebraska over the past week, the Cornhusker Motor Club reported. The club said its weekly survey of Nebraska service stations shows no-lead gasoline was down four-tenths of a cent. The club said all of the reporting stations had good supplies of gasoline and foresee no end-of-the-month shortages.

Grant Of $88,685 Goes To Ed Unit

Ainsworth (UPI) — Educational Service Unit 17 has been awarded $88,685 for the 1974-75 school year under the elementary secondary education act. Dr. Randall T. Ambert, chief administrator for the service unit, said the grant from the State Department of Education will be used to provide a supplementary art program for schools in Brown, Cherry, Keya Papa and Rock counties. Lynn Thorpe, who formerly taught in Lincoln and Iowa, will be project director.

More Richardson County Funds OK'd

Washington (AP) — An additional $50,000 federal loan to Richardson County's Rural Water District No. 1 in Nebraska was announced Friday by Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb. Previously, the district had secured $755,000 in financing from the U.S. Farmers Home Administration. The additional money will permit the district to expand its service to 26 more customers, bringing the total number of farms, homes and other establishments served by the district to 271.

Nebraska Economic Condition In May Both Better, Worse

Economic conditions in Nebraska and the United States during May were better, or worse, than they were in April, depending upon which comparison is used.

Conditions were not as much above the same month a year ago as they were in April, but in comparison with 1967 May figures turned upward after a 3-month slide.

According to "Business in Nebraska," a monthly publication of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the dollar volume of agricultural products in the state was 7% below May of last year. In April the volume had been 12% above the previous year.

Ag Price Drop

This decline reflects the drop in Nebraska agricultural prices of 6.5% from last year and a slump in the physical volume of products sold.

If an analysis of this slump were made, it would probably indicate that livestock prices recorded the greatest decline. It should also be noted that May figures were prior to the beginning of drought conditions. The impact of dry weather will be closely watched in future months.

The May retail sales increase of 14% for Nebraska lost most of its steam when adjusted for the inflationary price increase and subsided to only about 3% above last year in real terms.

UNL Receives NASA Grant For Resource Studies

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln has received more than $100,000 from NASA this year to continue study of natural resources management via data obtained from an orbiting satellite.

During the past three years, the remote sensing project coordinated by Dr. James V. Drew, dean of graduate studies at UNL, has been granted more than $300,000 and has produced information for land use and energy use planning.

"Concerns about land use and energy use policies are high but at the same time are sensitive, and it is difficult to make substantial headway in finding solutions," Drew points out.

Gathers Needed Facts

"A critical part of developing these policies is to have an inventory of facts about land use. ERTS (Earth Resources Technological Satellite) provides us with a rapid means we have never had before of gathering facts that will be needed by citizen groups and government in making policy decisions."

Among the first applications of ERTS data was the production of a map of Nebraska showing land use. The Remote Sensing Center in the Conservation and Survey Division headed by Dr. Marvin Carlson also used ERTS data in constructing a land use map of Lancaster County.

"An example of ERTS application to energy consumption planning can probably best be illustrated in the field of agriculture," Drew says.

Irrigation Energy User

"Irrigation is a big user of energy in this state, so it is important that we anticipate fuel needs."

"For example, 1972 ERTS pictures of Box Butte County showed 54 center pivot irrigation systems in operation, while by 1973 our data indicated that this number has jumped to 116. So you can see that this type of monitoring can help us reach a more accurate forecast as to the amount of fuel that will be required for a season. It also helps us in judging the demand being placed on water resources in a given area and suggests water management practices that may need to be considered," Drew explained.

Dr. Paul M. Seever of the agronomy department has developed means of estimating the density of vegetation covering the Nebraska Sand Hills and thus can more accurately advise range management people about stocking rates and forage available across this vast area of our state.

Water Quality Studies

Dr. Gary L. Hergenrader of the School of Life Sciences is studying the quality of water in Nebraska reservoirs through satellite produced data.

NU geologists are developing means of detecting major structural features in Nebraska geology. Preliminary results suggest that ERTS pictures may be very helpful in locating stable areas which would be safe places to build nuclear power plants.

Local Educators Supply 'Midas Touch'—Trotter

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Assistant U.S. Secretary for Education Virginia Y. Trotter said in Lincoln Friday learning institutions must work to provide "equal access" to every person, regardless of age or sex.

The No. 2 education official in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said government must assume a strong but not "all-encompassing role" in education.

The bill (HR89), supported by the National Education Association, will "strengthen the quality of education with equal opportunity for all Americans," she said.

Aids Minority Students

Specifically, she said, the bill will aid minority students whose second language is English, gifted students and the handicapped. It will also provide access for women to study for male-dominated professions.

Trotter said the success of educational inroads will require increased funding for research.

Research by the National Institute of Education aims to improve "the right to read, a fundamental principle of education" in the U.S., she said, adding there are today 19 million adults and 7 million children who are "functionally illiterate."

"This is something we cannot live with," she said, submitting it will take "complete community involvement" to rectify.

Not 'Giant Machine'

Trotter said her pre-conceived notion that Washington would be a "giant machine" has proved false.

Federal officials recognize that educators can no longer rely on conventional instruction. She said "the student needs to be able to make a reasonable choice" with a hand in decisions about curriculum.

She cited as a leading example the State University of Nebraska (SUN), which this fall will begin offering multi-media college courses in the home. SUN developed its two pilot courses according to a survey of Nebraskans' learning desires.

There is "a growing awareness" that "formal education is not something that must be completed in one block before entering a career," Trotter said, "and that is good."

Institutions must respond to continuing education needs for those who desire career changes and training, she said, and must be "more sensitive to the challenge of intercultural understanding."

Traditions Foster Inertia

Declaring that traditions which foster inertia must be uprooted, she pledged not to resist change in education "to guarantee people participation in every program at any level for which they are capable."

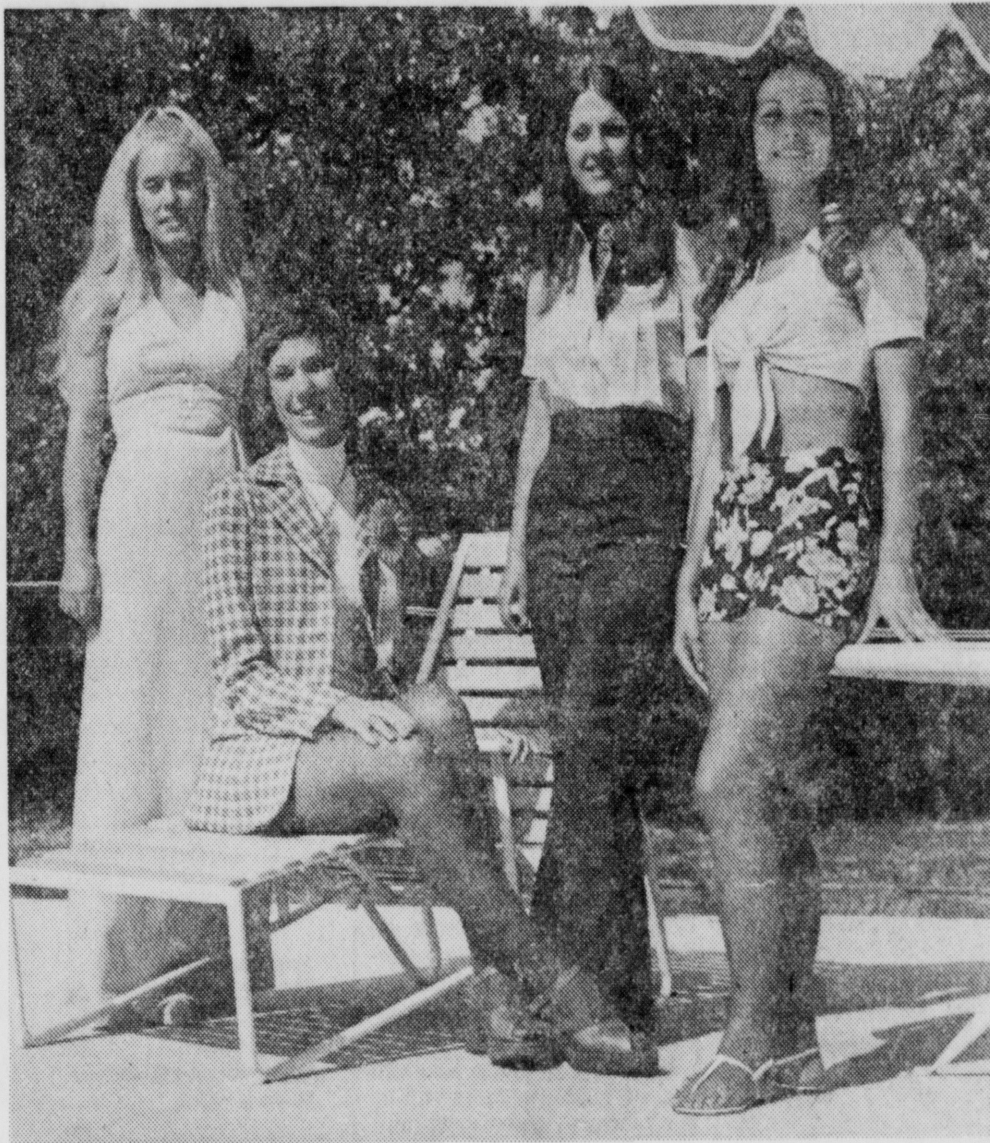

"One of the most exciting revolutions of our time," Trotter said, is the Title 9 provision to the 1972 education amendments, providing equal educational opportunity for women.

More Forage Available

Although the recent rains were too late to put any grain on Nebraska's corn, they have considerably boosted the tonnage of forage that will be available for cattle feed.

That's the consensus of the Nebraska Grain Marketing and Utilization Committee, a group of representatives from agribusiness, agriculture, state agencies, and the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Members of the committee, who met in Lincoln this week, agreed that many areas of Nebraska will have corn grow to maturity with less than 10 bushels of corn per acre — too little to harvest for grain. However, the corn plants will make excellent silage for cattle.

Committee member Paul Guyer, NU Extension beef specialist, commented, "Since it has rained, attitudes have gone from thoughts of liquidating or severely culling cow herds to finding the best ways to feed all this forage."

Although the rain and cool weather came too late for corn, Guyer noted that milo in eastern Nebraska responded quickly and has begun popping heads.

"It looks like it will produce several bushels of grain per acre if frost doesn't come early."

"In order to salvage the corn crop as cattle feed, we may have to move the cows some distance to where the feed is," he explained. "All the crop will make good cow feed standing in the field. Or it can be put in the silo at less than 70 or 75% moisture."

If the corn field does have some corn in it, it's probably a little better feed than the dry cow needs, Guyer said.

The NU beef specialist suggested, "If you're leaving the corn standing for cows to graze, it would be wise to first graze the stalks lightly with steers to get most of the grain, then follow with cows."

The other alternative is to harvest corn silage for growing and finishing rations.

5-Inch Rain Reported In Eastern Nebraska

For the second straight day, portions of eastern Nebraska Friday received heavy rains — up to 5.00 inches at Rulo in the extreme southeastern part of the state.

Lincoln Gets 1.83

Lincoln's early morning rain, measuring 1.83 inches, was accompanied by a severe electrical storm.

A 12,500 volt line was "either hit by lightning or hit by a falling tree limb" about dawn Friday and caused a three-hour power outage in southeast Lincoln, Lincoln Electric System spokesman Herm Hempel reported.

Hempel said the outage occurred in an area bounded by 48th to 84 St., O St. to South St.

Elsewhere in the state, golf-ball-size hail, heavy rain and strong winds hit the Merna, Taylor and Broken Bow areas in north central Nebraska early Friday.

Funnel clouds were spotted Friday in the northeastern community of Scribner where strong winds downed trees and branches.

Hot, Dry July Verified

Meanwhile, a climatic summary of July, 1974, in Nebraska released Friday from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Conservation and Survey Division verifies that July was indeed a hot, dry month in the state.

Schwartzkopf Ends City Water Rationing

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf lifted the water rationing plan Friday which was imposed during the height of the drought last month.

The mayor said he removed the watering restrictions due to recent rains, more than two inches this week.

Under the plan which was implemented July 20, persons whose addresses ended in an odd number could water their lawns on odd-numbered days, and those with an even number could water on the even-numbered day of the week.

Violation of that edict resulted first in warnings from water system personnel, building inspectors and police officers. Repeated violators got their water disconnected.

Schwartzkopf said 14 people had their water disconnected during the time the emergency was declared. Violators were forced to pay a $2 fee to the city treasurer and post a $100 bond. The mayor said Friday that violators can now pick up their bond at the clerk's office.

15 Bennet Area Burglary Cases Now Cleared Up

Fifteen burglaries and larcenies have been cleared up in the Bennet area with the apprehension of four 14 and 15-year old boys, Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Joe Spilchal reported Friday.

Spilchal said the boys, all from the Bennet area, were released to the custody of their parents. He declined to release their identities pending further investigation.

Spilchal said the burglaries and larcenies all occurred in the Bennet area. About $500 of goods, "clothes and everything," had been stolen, he said, and all of it was recovered.

All the offenses occurred during the last two months, Spilchal said, with the last four occurring Monday night.

Duncan Robbery Suspects Sought

Two male suspects were being sought Friday afternoon in connection with the strongarm robbery of a store in Duncan, the State Patrol in Norfolk said.

The patrol said two men, both about 19 years old, tied up the proprietor of the store before the robbery was committed.

The two men then fled in a car, the patrol said. It was not immediately known what was taken.

The patrol described one man as about six feet tall with blonde hair. The other was described as about five feet eight.

Crash Victims Raise Toll Of State Traffic Fatalities

By The Associated Press

A South Sioux City woman died Thursday in a one-vehicle crash near Waterbury, and Omaha officials Friday issued a report saying the death of an Omaha man earlier this month will also be considered a traffic fatality.

The two deaths raised the state's 1974 traffic toll to 237, compared with 249 on this date last year.

Diane Matson, 30, died when the pickup truck she was riding in went out of control and left a

Lincolnite Dies Of Bullet Wound

A Lincoln man died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to his head late Friday afternoon, according to deputy sheriff Lt. Mel Green.

Green said Kirby Lehman, 21, of 2220 No. 61st, was found in his bedroom by his mother when she returned home.

Prasch Says Superintendents Need 'More Cohesive Voice'

"Superintendents need to speak with a more cohesive voice" on current state and local educational issues, Lincoln Public Schools Supt. John Prasch said Friday.

"A lot of educational decisions are being made without our serious input," he told about 260 Nebraska school administrators attending the third annual Commissioner's Day.

Prasch urged superintendents to "aggressively seek to be heard," and to "see ourselves as leaders on a broad front" beyond kindergarten through 12th grade.

Participation Needed

School executives should participate in community planning and funding measures for educational needs, said Prasch, president-elect of the Nebraska Council of School Administrators, superintendents' section.

He cited as an example the "search for any statewide leadership" which is negligible on LB772, the controversial state aid to education bill that Friday drew a lawsuit over a November referendum ballot on it.

If the bill gets to the polls, Prasch said "its passage will depend upon what superintendents do in their own communities" in a grass-roots educational effort.

'Traditional Aloofness'

In asserting their leadership, Prasch said perhaps the superintendents ought to abandon "traditional aloofness to the party politics."

He said school administrators must recognize that "the labor-management model is the way we're going to deal with our teacher associations" for contract agreements.

Prasch said the Nebraska Department of Education (NDE) and Commissioner Cecil Stanley have "done a great deal to foster two-way dialogue."

Opinions Polarized

Meanwhile, he said, both NDE and educators must get the issues to the people, who are polarized in their opinions and using "more hostile ways to get their wishes."

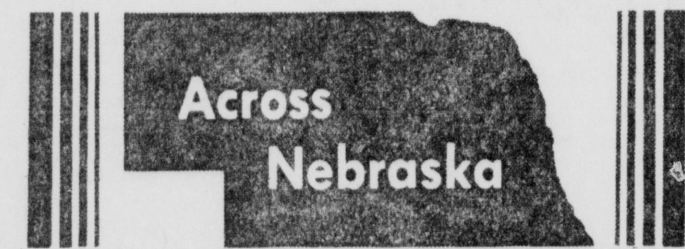

Prasch said local superintendents must "reexamine our role with the State Department of Education" and support the improvement of its staff salaries to retain leadership and expertise.

Although a good instructional program should be the goal of all schools, it will "not (be) enough to maintain the kind of support we need for all kinds of human needs," Prasch said.

Fluoridation Goes On Crete Ballot

Crete — Whether or not Crete's water supply will be fluoridated will be decided by voters at the November general election. The issue was placed on the ballot via petitions. City Clerk Glen Baker reported to the City Council meeting that 465 qualified signatures were included on the petitions, compared to a necessary 258 signers.

Exon, Scheig To Address Group

Seward — Gov. J. James Exon and Henry F. Scheig, president of Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL), will be featured speakers at the annual convention of the Nebraska Federation of AAL Local Branches here Sunday. They will address the federation's annual business meeting on the campus at Concordia Teachers College during the final session of the three-day gathering. Dale Pinnt of Norfolk serves as president of the Nebraska AAL Federation.

Prices Down For Regular Gas

Omaha (AP) — Regular gasoline prices dropped two-tenths of a cent per gallon in Nebraska over the past week, the Cornhusker Motor Club reported. The club said its weekly survey of Nebraska service stations shows no-lead gasoline was down four-tenths of a cent. The club said all of the reporting stations had good supplies of gasoline and foresees no end-of-the-month shortages.

Grant Of $88,685 Goes To Ed Unit

Ainsworth (UPI) — Educational Service Unit 17 has been awarded $88,685 for the 1974-75 school year under the elementary secondary education act. Dr. Randall T. Ambert, chief administrator for the service unit, said the grant from the State Department of Education will be used to provide a supplementary art program for schools in Brown, Cherry, Keya Papa and Rock counties. Lynn Thorpe, who formerly taught in Lincoln and Iowa, will be project director.

More Richardson County Funds OK'd

Washington (AP) — An additional $50,000 federal loan to Richardson County's Rural Water District No. 1 in Nebraska was announced Friday by Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb. Previously, the district had secured $755,000 in financing from the U.S. Farmers Home Administration. The additional money will permit the district to expand its service to 26 more customers, bringing the total number of farms, homes and other establishments served by the district to 271.

Omaha Man Has Breast Operation

Omaha (AP) — Physicians throughout the nation can read this month about an Omaha man who underwent surgery for breast cancer.

The case history of Edwin Minkin appears in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The authors of the article are Dr. Henry T. Lynch, chairman of the department of preventive medicine and public health at Creighton University; Arnold T. Kaplan, a former associate, and Mrs. Lynch, a registered nurse.

Minkin is not named in the article, but has indicated that his attitude toward publicity has not changed "in the hope that it will save even one life."

Minkin, 55, is a wholesale wig salesman.

He discovered a lump on his left side in 1972.

Physicians first thought the lump to be fatty tissue, but tests produced a diagnosis of cancer.

USDA Official Finds Drought Appalling

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

First District Congressman Charles Thone and his wife Ruth spent their 21st wedding anniversary Friday walking through muddy cornfields with an official of the U.S. Department of Agriculture from Washington, in an effort to convince him Nebraska had a drought.

Glen Weir, deputy administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), a USDA agency, told reporters he was appalled by the drought disaster.

"It is every bit as bad as the crop report indicated. The fields look pretty good to city folks. Farmers can tell from the road that they don't look right, but when you get out into the field and strip back the husks you find the ears don't have any corn on them," Weir said.

Programs Confusing
Weir also learned that farmers are terribly confused by the wide variety of programs being administered by several different agencies to aid them with drought related problems.

"The agencies are learning to talk to each other in Washington. I hope they will soon do this on the local level so farmers will be better informed," he said.

Two features of the ASCS program administered by Weir that seem to confuse farmers most were that the amount of the payment was tied to the size of their corn allotment and the form they were asked to sign if they wanted to harvest their crop for silage.

Half Out-Of-Pocket Cost
Robert Schlichtemeier of Nehawaka said his payment didn't come anywhere near his expenses in putting in his crop. He estimated his payment was less than half of his out-of-pocket cost for the crop, which is a total loss.

Robert Kreifles of Nebraska City told Weir, "This form is like signing a blank check. I think it is an insult to a farmer," he said.

Paul Sindt, administrator of the state ASCS office explained that the form required the farmer to leave a strip of unharvested corn so the field inspectors could determine if there was any grain produced in the field.

"We just don't have enough fieldmen to get to all the fields in time. This is to permit you to cut silage without waiting for the inspector. If you don't want to sign the form, you don't have to, but you must wait for the inspector or abandon the payment," Sindt explained.

Weir said it was painfully plain that his agency had a tremendous public relations job in explaining the intricate details of the program.

Congressman Thone collected several ears of corn that were poorly pollinated, showing only a few kernels, and a handful of soybean pods to take back to show Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.

"The secretary called me this morning and asked that I bring him back a personal report along with Mr. Weir," Thone said.

Mrs. Thone seemed to be enjoying the visiting with farmers as her husband explained what aid was available to them. She said she was pleased that the congressman did recall their wedding date. "He only missed the year by one," she said.

Creek Eyesore Could Be Park

Falls City — Officials of this small city took a local problem to their congressman here Friday in an effort to turn a community eyesore into a park and solve a pollution problem at the same time.

The problem is Rhine Creek, an open ditch that drains a seven-block-long area of the city but has become a brush and trash strewn mess.

Mayor Dale Shaffer told Congressman Charles Thone the problem had existed for some time but a lack of funds had made any major improvement in the problem impossible.

Rat Infestation
The mayor noted that the city had purchased some houses in the area to remove ramshackle buildings and reduce rat infestations.

"The creek breeds poor housing, and the poor housing adds to the problems of the creek. We need to solve both the problem of better low income housing and find a way to turn this creek into a park," he said.

Shaffer appealed to Thone to "tell us who to see, where to go or what to do to get some kind of advice and if possible some money."

New Housing Bill
Kratz said a new housing bill that was soon to go to the President for his signature might offer some aid to the city.

"I haven't read the final version of the bill yet, but I think it might cover this situation. There are funds for development projects, for housing programs for the elderly and a rental arrangement for low income people," he said.

Kratz offered to bring a final version of the bill to Falls City once it was signed by President Ford for discussions with local officials on how to deal with their problems.

Act Aggressively
Thone told the council members, "It is important that you act aggressively on this problem. The people that get aid in these kinds of the things are the ones that ask for it."

Kratz and Thone toured the site of the creek and visited with local residents about flooding and sewage problems they had as a result of the flooding from the creek during a 6-inch rain fall in the area earlier this week.

Saunders Sheriff Appears Under Protest At Hearing

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Wahoo — Saunders County Sheriff Joe Divis appeared at a public hearing under protest Friday to charge in a written statement that the hearing was not administrative in purpose, but was "intended as a political attack on the sheriff."

The statement, prepared and read to the County Board of Supervisors by Fremont attorney Richard L. Kuhlman, objected to the hearing on the grounds that:

— Notice given Sheriff Divis of the hearing was "not sufficient notice" as required by the statute "under which the hearing is apparently called;"

— "The real purpose of the hearing is not one of the purposes for which a hearing can be held," as evidenced by statements made by an unidentified county supervisor quoted in the August 14 Lincoln Journal and August 15 Lincoln Star;

— The hearing was "not intended to be an administrative hearing but is intended as a political attack on the sheriff;"

— The notice contained no official indication as to what this conduct or willful neglect of duty Sheriff Divis is accused of, "thus denying him of all semblance of fair play and due process of law."

Kuhlman then recommended that the board drop the hearing and instructed Divis not to answer questions since "no proper notice" had been given the sheriff, he said, to enable him to prepare for the hearing.

Kuhlman intercepted two questions addressed by supervisors to Sheriff Divis by instructing the sheriff not to respond.

Supervisor Louis Wotipka of Wahoo said he found statements in the newspapers "very disturbing."

Coverage Unfair
It's unfair, he said, that remarks of one supervisor should be made public "when it's just one man's opinion."

"I think everyone in here knows how Watergate started," said Wotipka. "... if we can't call Joe in here to answer a few questions without its being splattered all over like this, the country is going to hell."

The board member quoted in the Lincoln Journal and Lincoln Star, who asked not to be identified, had said that the board unofficially supports Divis' opponent in his November reelection effort, but that the timing of the board's action, three months before the election, was coincidental.

The hearing is non-political in purpose, the supervisor said.

Attorney Kuhlman assured the board that if Sheriff Divis "is given a proper notice, he will be obligated to answer and he will answer."

The board concluded the hearing, and board chairman George Rezac said it would "discuss after we get done here what we really want to do and let (Divis) know."

2 Accused Of Burglary In Kearney

Kearney (AP) — Burglary charges were filed in Buffalo County Court against two young men apprehended by police early Thursday after a burglary at the Valley Pharmacy, located in the Kearney Clinic.

The two are 28-year-old Edward Martin Keapine, who has a Kearney address, and 22-year-old Joshua A. Ruffner, who listed a California address.

Cruiser officers on routine patrol said they discovered the pair emerging from the pharmacy shortly before midnight Wednesday. Officers chased on foot but the suspects eluded them.

They were apprehended a short time later.

A sack filled with drugs was allegedly dropped near the pharmacy as they ran from police.

The two are being held in the county jail.

2 Accused Of Burglary In Kearney

Kearney (AP) — Burglary charges were filed in Buffalo County Court against two young men apprehended by police early Thursday after a burglary at the Valley Pharmacy, located in the Kearney Clinic.

The two are 26-year-old Edward Martin Keapling, who has a Kearney address, and 22-year-old Joshua A. Ruffner, who listed a California address. Cruiser officers on routine patrol said they discovered the pair emerging from the pharmacy shortly before midnight Wednesday. Officers chased on foot but the suspects eluded them.

They were apprehended a short time later.

A sack filled with drugs was allegedly dropped near the pharmacy as they ran from police.

The two are being held in the county jail.

USDA Official Finds Drought Appalling

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

First District Congressman Charles Thone and his wife Ruth spent their 21st wedding anniversary Friday walking through muddy cornfields with an official of the U.S. Department of Agriculture from Washington, in an effort to convince him Nebraska had a drought.

Glen Weir, deputy administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), a USDA agency, told reporters he was appalled by the drought disaster.

"It is every bit as bad as the crop report indicated. The fields look pretty good to city folks. Farmers can tell from the road that they don't look right, but when you get out into the field and strip back the husks you find the ears don't have any corn on them," Weir said.

Programs Confusing

Weir also learned that farmers are terribly confused by the wide variety of programs being administered by several different agencies to aid them with drought related problems.

"The agencies are learning to talk to each other in Washington. I hope they will soon do this on the local level so farmers will be better informed," he said.

Two features of the ASCS program administered by Weir that seem to confuse farmers most were that the amount of the payment was tied to the size of their corn allotment and the form they were asked to sign if they wanted to harvest their crop for silage.

Half Out-Of-Pocket Cost

said his payment didn't come anywhere near his expenses in putting in his crop. He estimated his payment was less than half of his out-of-pocket cost for the crop, which is a total loss.

Robert Kreifles of Nebraska City told Weir, "This form is like signing a blank check. I think it is an insult to a farmer," he said.

Paul Sindt, administrator of the state ASCS office explained that the form required the farmer to leave a strip of unharvested corn so the field inspectors could determine if there was any grain produced in the field.

"We just don't have enough fieldmen to get to all the fields in time. This is to permit you to cut silage without waiting for the inspector. If you don't want to sign the form, you don't have to, but you must wait for the inspector or abandon don the payment," Sindt explained.

Weir said it was painfully plain that his agency had a tremendous public relations job in explaining the intricate details of the program.

Congressman Thone collected several ears of corn that were poorly pollinated, showing only a few kernels, and a handful of soybean pods to take back to show Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.

"The secretary called me this morning and asked that I bring him back a personal report along with Mr. Weir," Thone said.

Mrs. Thone seemed to be enjoying the visiting with farmers as her husband explained what aid was available to them. She said she was pleased that the congressman did recall their wedding date. "He only missed the year by one," she said.

Creek Eyesore Could Be Park

Falls City — Officials of this small city took a local problem to their congressman here Friday in an effort to turn a community eyesore into a park and solve a pollution problem at the same time.

The problem is Rhine Creek, an open ditch that drains a seven-block-long area of the city but has become a brush and trash strewn mess.

Mayor Dale Shaffer told Congressman Charles Thone the problem had existed for some time but a lack of funds had made any major improvement in the problem impossible.

Rat Infestation

The mayor noted that the city had purchased some houses in the area to remove ramshackle buildings and reduce rat infestations.

"The creek breeds poor housing, and the poor housing adds to the problems of the creek. We need to solve both the problem of better low income housing and find a way to turn this creek into a park," he said.

Shaffer appealed to Thone to "tell us who to see, where to go or what to do to get some kind of advice and if possible some money."

New Housing Bill

Kratz said a new housing bill that was soon to go to the President for his signature might offer some aid to the city.

"I haven't read the final version of the bill yet, but I think it might cover this situation. There are funds for development projects, for housing programs for the elderly and a rental arrangement for low income people," he said.

Kratz offered to bring a final version of the bill to Falls City once it was signed by President Ford for discussions with local officials on how to deal with their problems.

Act Aggressively

Thone told the council members, "It is important that you act aggressively on this problem. The people that get aid in these kinds of things are the ones that ask for it."

Kratz and Thone toured the site of the creek and visited with local residents about flooding and sewage problems they had as a result of the flooding from the creek during a 6-inch rain fall in the area earlier this week.

Wahoo — Saunders County Sheriff Joe Divis appeared at a public hearing under protest Friday to charge in a written statement that the hearing was not administrative in purpose, but was "intended as a political attack on the sheriff."

The statement, prepared and read to the County Board of Supervisors by Fremont attorney Richard L. Kuhlman, objected to the hearing on the grounds that:

— Notice given Sheriff Divis of the hearing was "not sufficient notice" as required by the statute "under which the hearing is apparently called;"

— "The real purpose of the hearing is not one of the purposes for which a hearing can be held," as evidenced by statements made by an unidentified county supervisor quoted in the August 14 Lincoln Journal and August 15 Lincoln Star;

— The hearing was "not intended to be an administrative hearing but is intended as a political attack on the sheriff;"

— The notice contained no official indication as to what this conduct or willful neglect of duty Sheriff Divis is accused of, "thus denying him of all semblance of fair play and due process of law."

Kuhlman then recommended that the board drop the hearing and instructed Divis not to answer questions since "no proper notice" had been given the sheriff, he said, to enable him to prepare for the hearing.

Kuhlman intercepted two questions addressed by supervisors to Sheriff Divis by instructing the sheriff not to respond.

Supervisor Louis Wotipka of Wahoo said he found statements in the newspapers "very disturbing."

It's unfair, he said, that remarks of one supervisor should be made public "when it's just one man's opinion."

Courts Must Determine If Bill Will Go On Ballot

By United Press International
Contending it was a constitutional test, the Nebraska State School Boards Association (NSSBA) Friday filed a court challenge to placing Nebraska's new school aid bill on the November ballot for voter approval.

Beermann said the November ballot petition drive led by state Sens. David Stahmer of Omaha and Ramey Whitney of Chappell was successful.

Vote Not Feared
Leonard L. Lawrence, NSSBA president from Bellevue, said the association didn't "fear" a public vote on LB722, "but I feel that if we are to have a government by referendum, then we do not need a legislature."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, withstood a veto attempt by Gov. J. J. Exon during the 1974 unicameral go into law.

Increasing Appropriations
It calls for increasing the present $55 million state aid to schools annual appropriation over a two year period to approximately 50% of the operational costs of public schools. It has been estimated when fully implemented, the law would require approximately $150 million annually.

Lawrence contended the Nebraska constitution "specifically provides" that the reserved referendum power "was not to be employed on bills making appropriations for the expenses of state government or state institutions."

However, Stahmer said, he also believes other sizable districts, such as those in Lincoln and Grand Island, "would rule the day they had to come to us (the legislature) hat in hand to get every dollar they need."

The Omaha lawmaker said his area has the "worst educational problems in the state because of the fiasco of school reorganization which was foisted on us by the unicameral before there was one man, one vote."

He said, "I don't see any effort by the state to try and straighten out our mess. Ironically, outstate Senators looking for property tax relief inadvertently might help us solve our problems."

"It is time to test the constitutional question first," Lawrence said. "If the courts decide a vote on LB722 is proper, I am confident that Nebraska voters will retain LB722."

"I believe the courts need to make a determination of this issue so that all may, now and in the future, comply with the provisions of the Nebraska constitution."

Stocks Post 7th Straight Losing Day

New York (AP) — Stock prices posted their seventh straight losing day Friday in slow trading. Brokers blamed the market's losses on the economy's seemingly endless battle with inflation.

The government's report Friday that July housing starts were down 16 percent from last year provided no break in the bad news.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up 3 points in early trading on bargain buying, turned and fell 6.34 to 731.54, a drop of 66.02 in the Dow since Richard M. Nixon's resignation, setting a new four-year low for the blue chip average.

The NYSE broad-based composite index slipped .30 to 39.76 and on the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index dropped on 21 to 75.87.

Manown Kisor of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis observed: "The Dow is just continuing its downward drift. The losses in some high-price stocks like Eastman Kodak are just portfolio managers giving up in despair."

Evans Products was the Big Board volume leader, off 1/2 at 4 1/2, followed by Westinghouse Electric, down 1/2 to 12 1/2.

British Petroleum fell 3/4 to 6 1/2 and Firestone Tire dipped 1/2 to 14 1/2, with a 100,000-share block trade at 15. Fleming Co. gained 1/2 to 9 1/4.

Some of the biggest losers Friday included Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/2 to 83 1/2; Atlantic Richfield, down 2 1/2 to 80 1/2; Du Pont, down 4 1/2 to 138 1/2; Weyerhaeuser, off 1 1/2 to 31 1/2; and Halliburton, down 4 1/2 to 12 1/2.

Gold stocks were mostly higher as the price of gold rose on European markets. Homestake Mines jumped 2 1/2 to 67 1/2, Dome Mines rose 2 to 63 1/2, and Campbell Red Lake advanced 3/4 to 45 1/2. ASA, Ltd., was up 1/2 to 10 1/2, and Helca Mining gained 1/2 to 23 1/4.

OMAHA HOG TRADE BRISK
Omaha (AP) — The hog trade was brisk Friday on the Omaha livestock market, but cattle were scarce, and there were not enough slaughter lamb offerings in any one class to establish a market trend.

Barrows and gilts were active, trading from 75-cents to $1.25 higher, many fully $1.00 up.
Weights over 280-pounds were scarce.

The butcher top was $40.75 sparingly, with the bulk clearing $35.25-$39.00.
Sows made up for Thursday's downturn with a 50-cents to $1.00 higher call. Some offerings were up as much as $1.50.

Bulk sows traded from $29.50, with a top of $36.00.
The fresh cattle supply was small, and made up mostly of cows. Trading was slow.

On limited sales, observers called the market steady, with utility and commercial cows ranging from $23.50-$25.00, a few extra good utilities to $26.50.

Senator Amazed At Bill Challenge

By United Press International
One of the leaders in the drive to place the recently enacted state aid to schools law before the voters in the November election said Friday he was "amazed" that the State School Boards Assn. was challenging the referendum effort in court.

Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha said he was further amazed by the Association's position — "that the state constitution does not allow a referendum on the funding of state institutions."

According to Stahmer, the association is "absolutely correct on this. The only question is whether the schools are a state institution and if they are, the Constitution absolutely prohibits the state funding of state institutions with the property tax."

He added: "I would have to believe therefore that this would have to knock out all property taxes for schools and consequently the schools would have to be funded completely through the Unicameral with the state sales and income taxes. Schools would be in a position similar to the University of Nebraska which has to come before the legislature's budget committee for its money."

Stahmer said, "As an Omaha senator, this doesn't bother me one bit," adding that he believes the Unicameral and budget committee could do a better job than is currently being done in metropolitan Omaha.

However, Stahmer said, he also believes other sizable districts, such as those in Lincoln and Grand Island, "would rule the day they had to come to us (the legislature) hat in hand to get every dollar they need."

The Omaha lawmaker said his area has the "worst educational problems in the state because of the fiasco of school reorganization which was foisted on us by the unicameral before there was one man, one vote."

He said, "I don't see any effort by the state to try and straighten out our mess. Ironically, outstate Senators looking for property tax relief inadvertently might help us solve our problems."

Lawrence called the legislation a "good law", adding that if the need for changes in it "becomes apparent, future legislatures will have the opportunity to make them."

Gold stocks were mostly higher as the price of gold rose on European markets. Homestake Mines jumped 2 1/2 to 67 1/2, Dome Mines rose 2 to 63 1/2, and Campbell Red Lake advanced 3/4 to 45 1/2. ASA, Ltd., was up 1/2 to 10 1/2, and Helca Mining gained 1/2 to 23 1/4.

Such a planner, the judge said, "is a more dangerous person than one who kills another with whom he individually has a dispute."

Minard was killed four years ago by a suitcase bomb as he investigate a call to a vacant Omaha residence.

Seven other officers were injured in the blast.

Rice was arrested four days after the bombing, and dynamite particles were found at his home and in his clothing.

Urbom said the particles were discovered through an illegal search, and should not have been allowed as evidence in the trial.

Urbom said he realized "the wisdom of the policy of those exclusionary rules is not universally acknowledged."

Urbom said the Rice case could eventually end up in the U.S. Supreme Court as a test case for the exclusionary rules.

The valuation for the City of Scottsbluff was set at more than $38.9 million, up about $1 million from last year.

The City of Gering's assessment also was up more than $1 million with a current $14.8 million tag. Gering school district's assessment was placed at more than $20.5 million.

Only two other Scotts Bluff County communities, Mitchell and Morrill, had valuations of more than $1 million.

McGrew, a community of about 100 residents, had the lowest, $84,660.

Racial Balance Transfer Plan Is Successful
Omaha (AP) — A special effort to shift 300 black students out of Horace Mann Jr. High School is meeting with success, according to Rene Hlavac, assistant superintendent of the Omaha School District.

Stocks Post 7th Straight Losing Day

New York (AP) — Stock prices posted their seventh straight losing day Friday in slow trading. Brokers blamed the market's losses on the economy's seemingly endless battle with inflation.

The government's report Friday that July housing starts were down 16 percent from last year provided no break in the bad news.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up 3 points in early trading on bargain buying, turned and fell 6.34 to 731.54, a drop of 66.02 in the Dow since Richard M. Nixon's resignation, setting a new four-year low for the blue chip average.

The NYSE broad-based composite index slipped .30 to 39.76 and on the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index dropped on 21 to 75.87.

Manown Kisor of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis observed: "The Dow is just continuing its downward drift. The losses in some high-price stocks like Eastman Kodak are just portfolio managers giving up in despair."

Evans Products was the Big Board volume leader, off 1/2 at 4 1/2, followed by Westinghouse Electric, down 1/2 to 12 1/2.

British Petroleum fell 3/4 to 6 1/2 and Firestone Tire dipped 1/2 to 14 1/2, with a 100,000-share block trade at 15. Fleming Co. gained 1/2 to 9 1/4.

Some of the biggest losers Friday included Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/2 to 83 1/2; Atlantic Richfield, down 2 1/2 to 80 1/2; Du Pont, down 4 1/2 to 138 1/2; Weyerhaeuser, off 1 1/2 to 31 1/2; and Halliburton, down 4 1/2 to 12 1/2.

Gold stocks were mostly higher as the price of gold rose on European markets. Homestake Mines jumped 2 1/2 to 67 1/2, Dome Mines rose 2 to 63 1/2, and Campbell Red Lake advanced 3/4 to 45 1/2. ASA, Ltd., was up 1/2 to 10 1/2, and Helca Mining gained 1/2 to 23 1/4.

OMAHA HOG TRADE BRISK
Omaha (AP) — The hog trade was brisk Friday on the Omaha livestock market, but cattle were scarce, and there were not enough slaughter lamb offerings in any one class to establish a market trend.

Barrows and gilts were active, trading from 75-cents to $1.25 higher, many fully $1.00 up.
Weights over 280-pounds were scarce.

The butcher top was $40.75 sparingly, with the bulk clearing $35.25-$39.00.
Sows made up for Thursday's downturn with a 50-cents to $1.00 higher call. Some offerings were up as much as $1.50.

Bulk sows traded from $29.50, with a top of $36.00.
The fresh cattle supply was small, and made up mostly of cows. Trading was slow.

On limited sales, observers called the market steady, with utility and commercial cows ranging from $23.50-$25.00, a few extra good utilities to $26.50.

Courts Must Determine If Bill Will Go On Ballot

By United Press International
Contending it was a constitutional test, the Nebraska State School Boards Association (NSSBA) Friday filed a court challenge to placing Nebraska's new school aid bill on the November ballot for voter approval.

Beermann said the November ballot petition drive led by state Sens. David Stahmer of Omaha and Ramey Whitney of Chappell was successful.

Vote Not Feared
Leonard L. Lawrence, NSSBA president from Bellevue, said the association didn't "fear" a public vote on LB722, "but I feel that if we are to have a government by referendum, then we do not need a legislature."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, withstood a veto attempt by Gov. J. J. Exon during the 1974 unicameral go into law.

Increasing Appropriations
It calls for increasing the present $55 million state aid to schools annual appropriation over a two year period to approximately 50% of the operational costs of public schools. It has been estimated when fully implemented, the law would require approximately $150 million annually.

Lawrence contended the Nebraska constitution "specifically provides" that the reserved referendum power "was not to be employed on bills making appropriations for the expenses of state government or state institutions."

However, Stahmer said, he also believes other sizable districts, such as those in Lincoln and Grand Island, "would rule the day they had to come to us (the legislature) hat in hand to get every dollar they need."

The Omaha lawmaker said his area has the "worst educational problems in the state because of the fiasco of school reorganization which was foisted on us by the unicameral before there was one man, one vote."

He said, "I don't see any effort by the state to try and straighten out our mess. Ironically, outstate Senators looking for property tax relief inadvertently might help us solve our problems."

not need a legislature."
"It is time to test the constitutional question first," Lawrence said. "If the courts decide a vote on LB722 is proper, I am confident that Nebraska voters will retain LB722."

"I believe the courts need to make a determination of this issue so that all may, now and in the future, comply with the provisions of the Nebraska constitution."

Urbom Denies Rice Bail

By The Associated Press
U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom Friday denied bail to David L. Rice, once-convicted of first-degree murder in the death of an Omaha policeman.

Earlier this summer, Urbom overturned Rice's conviction by a Douglas County jury, and the state is appealing Urbom's decision to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

If the state loses the appeal, it may give Rice a new trial.

Rice asked to be freed on bail pending the outcome of the appellate procedure.

Urbom denied the request, saying, "12 persons, sitting as a jury have declared that beyond a reasonable doubt, David Rice is guilty of murder."

The judge also said the murder of Officer Larry Minard was "carefully planned," and "aimed at anybody that was a police officer."

"Such a planner," the judge said, "is a more dangerous person than one who kills another with whom he individually has a dispute."

Minard was killed four years ago by a suitcase bomb as he investigated a call to a vacant Omaha residence.

Seven other officers were injured in the blast.

Rice was arrested four days after the bombing, and dynamite particles were found at his home and in his clothing.

Urbom said the particles were discovered through an illegal search, and should not have been allowed as evidence in the trial.

Urbom said he realized "the wisdom of the policy of those exclusionary rules is not universally acknowledged."

Urbom said the Rice case could eventually end up in the U. S. Supreme Court as a test case for the exclusionary rules.

Mental Retardation Programs In State To Be Investigated

By United Press International
The advisory committee to the state Departments of Welfare and Institutions will conduct a study of Nebraska's mental retardation programs, it was announced Friday.

Chairman John Humpal of Omaha said the five-member committee will convene Thursday in Lincoln for its initial meeting and a briefing.

The study, he said, would not only include state programs but community-based services for the mentally retarded as well.

Humpal said the purpose of the study is to provide recommendations to the two departments, community program administrators and the governor for improvement of the efficiency and quality of services rendered to mentally retarded Nebraskans.

He said the committee anticipates making a preliminary report by Dec. 1 and a final report, to include recommendations for legislation, by Jan. 1.

Humpal said Nebraska has gained national recognition for the quality of its mental retardation programs.

"Nevertheless," he said, "the size and complexity of such programs together with their special significance as a model venture of state and local cooperation and the recent interest shown in this area by various concerned groups, warrants a thorough review at this time."

The chairman said primary areas of concern in the study will be the relationships between the Departments of Welfare and Institutions and the various community programs under regional administration providing services.

Also, he said, the committee will be collecting information on the cost, utilization and efficiency of the various programs.

Racial Balance Transfer Plan Is Successful

Omaha (AP) — A special effort to shift 300 black students out of Horace Mann Jr. High School is meeting with success, according to Rene Hlavac, assistant superintendent of the Omaha School District.

Hlavac said the district has requests from transfers under the district's new racial balance transfer policy. Another 90 special education students are expected to be transferred, making mandatory reassignments unnecessary.

A task force has been meeting with the parents of the Mann students, encouraging the transfer requests.

Hlavac said 604 students in the district have requested racial balance-transfers so far.

The new policy permits only those transfers which will improve the racial balance within the district, unless there are unusual circumstances.

Stocks Post 7th Straight Losing Day

New York (AP) — Stock prices posted their seventh straight losing day Friday in slow trading. Brokers blamed the market's losses on the economy's seemingly endless battle with inflation.

The government's report Friday that July housing starts were down 16 per cent from last year provided no break in the bad news.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up 3 points in early trading on bargain buying, turned and fell 6.34 to 731.54, a drop of 66.02 in the Dow since Richard M. Nixon's resignation, setting a new four-year low for the blue chip average.

The NYSE broad-based composite index slipped .30 to 39.76 and on the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index dropped on .21 to 75.87.

Manown Kisor of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis observed: "The Dow is just continuing its downward drift. The losses in some high-price stocks like Eastman Kodak are just portfolio managers giving up in despair."

Evans Products was the Big Board volume leader, off 3/4 at 4 1/2, followed by Westinghouse Electric, down 1/4 to 12 1/2.

British Petroleum fell 3/4 to 6 3/4 and Firestone Tire dipped 1/4 to 14 1/2, with a 100,000-share block trade at 15. Fleming Co. gained 1/4 to 9 1/4.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

North All-Stars Victors

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The Nebraska Coaches Association All-Star Basketball Game, in dire need of some sort of tonic to recapture the fans' interest, found a bottle-full Friday night at Pershing Auditorium.

Doing the major share of the pouring in a 93-88 North upset win over the South were Kyle Hand, a boyishly enthusiastic leader out of the Sandhills, and Scott Hawk, a soft-spoken center from Omaha Creighton Prep.

Although neither entered the game as highly advertised as some teammates, their combined 44-point production came as no surprise to head North coach Al Bahe of Fremont.

"Man, I had Hawk pegged when he was a sophomore and played the high post. He turned around and plunked 'em in then," offered Bahe.

"I had Hand pegged about like he showed, too," said Bahe. "I didn't know whether he'd shoot that well, but he's a player, I'll tell you that. He's been shooting like that out there in the prairies (Alliance)."

It was a fitting gesture when Hawk and Hand exited together with the game in hand in the final half-minute. The 6-1 Hand sprinted to the North bench, grabbed the 6-6 Hawk around the head and hugged him twice.

That type of spirit and a competitive scrap are exactly what the Nebraska Coaches Association needed after the first five all-star games had been decided by a lopsided average spread of 18 points.

Friday's game kept the 4,500 fans in their seats until the final minute. Past games had been decided by 15, 11, 35, 22 and 7 points and the 7-point differential last year hardly reflected the lopsidedness that prevailed.

The North, in recording its fourth consecutive win after two opening losses in the series, retained an ironic all-star fact — the favored team has never won. Bahe wasn't quite sure his team would rise to the occasion to register the upset.

"These are the quietest bunch of 12 kids you'll find anywhere," he said. "I was wondering how to light a fire under them, so I went to my own player (Mick Higley of Fremont) and he told me: 'Coach, don't worry. We're ready.'"

Hand didn't appear until the second quarter, but he made himself immediately known, hitting 6 of 8 shots in the quarter. His last, a 51-foot howitzer from more than half-court as the buzzer, gave the North a 44-44 halftime tie.

Hawk deposited all four of his first quarter shots and fired in his first three tries in third quarter. He finished with an 11-star record of 11 field goals in 16 attempts for a game high 24 points, mostly from long-range.

Hand finished 10 of 16 from the field for 20 points and was aggressive in the scuffle underneath for rebounds.

Neither North standout is headed for a major college. Hawk earned a scholarship to Southwest Missouri State and Hand is bound for Rocky Mountain (Mont.) College on an athletic grant.

The South's Larry Vaculik (44) gets around the North's Jeff Elmore (53) of Omaha Benson. Elmore was the leader in the North's solid rebounding effort against the taller South.

Hawk's Hook Enthusiastic

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Soft-spoken Scott Hawk's sweeping hook shot and show of enthusiasm with 14 seconds left in the Coaches Association All-Star basketball game Friday night was typical of his spirited play throughout the North's 93-88 triumph over the South.

Hawk, the 6-6 North forward from Omaha Creighton Prep, dazzled the crowd of 4,500 at Pershing Auditorium in the first half, hitting four field goals in as many attempts.

Nothing changed in the second as he hit three more in a row before a 15-footer rimmed out.

His torrid shooting added up throughout the game as he broke the games' field goal record rifling 11 of 16 attempts to elipse the old mark of nine set by Hillary Howard of Omaha Cathedral in 1971.

Hawk ended the game with high-point honors of 24, also a North record, with a 2 for 2 performance from the free-throw line.

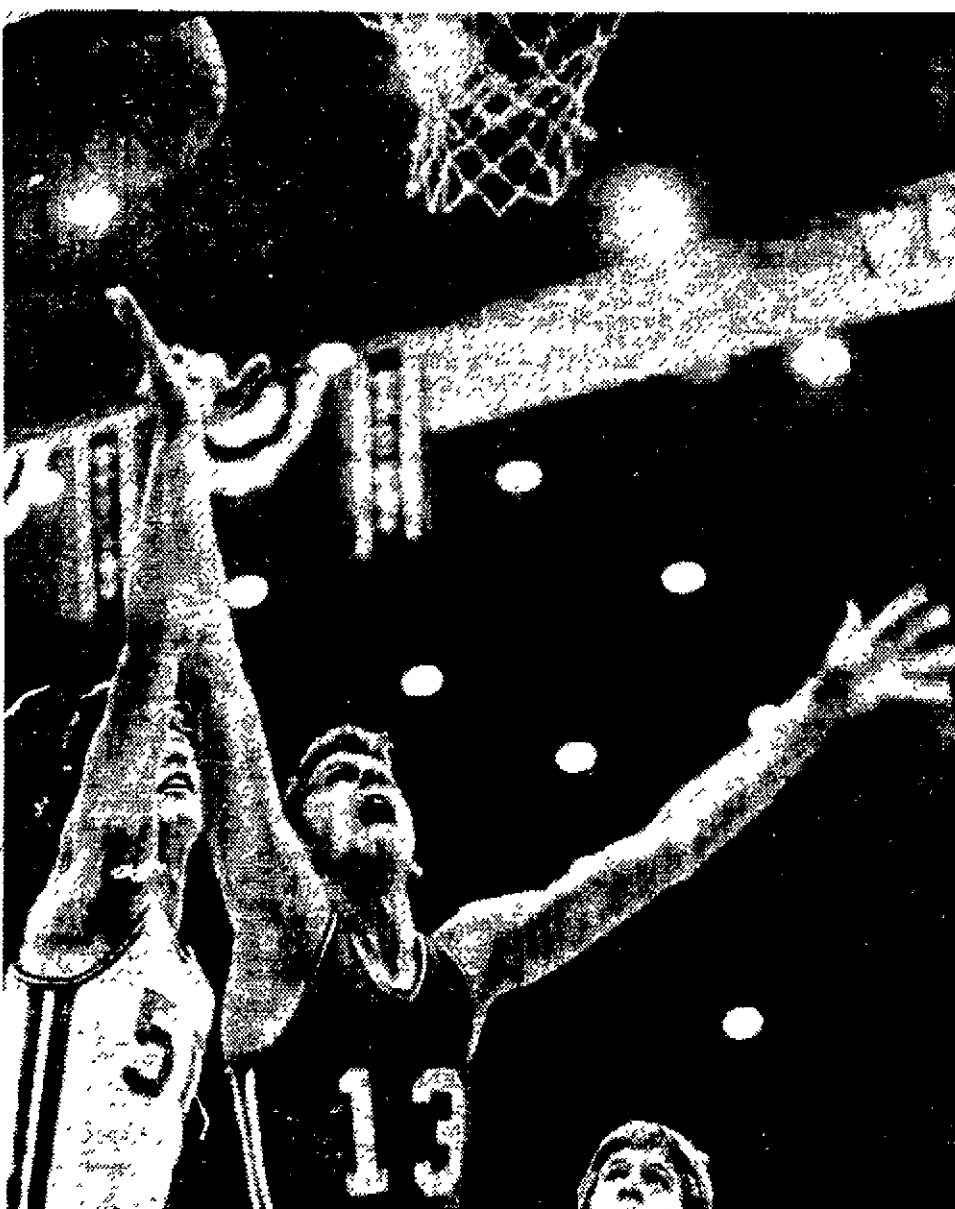

The Southwest Missouri State bound ballplayer missed three practices during the week because of an influenza attack, but the layoff didn't seem to effect him. He, however, didn't agree.

"I was really tired," he said smiling after the game. "It just hurt my wind, though. I had to break a couple of times."

Hawk decided himself when the breaks for rest would come. "When I didn't think I was helping the team anymore, I told coach Bahe to take me out," he noted.

His hot-hand in the first half set the tempo for the way he played the rest of the game. "I just wanted to keep shooting when I was hitting all those shots," he admitted. "I don't get outside like that very often. And when I did, I wanted to take advantage of it."

Denny's Saulnier Halts Scottsbluff Power, 2-1

By BOB MOYER

Mark Saulnier couldn't have picked a better time to have his best game of the year.

That's because his Denny's Champlin team was facing a crucial showdown with powerhouse, fending Scottsbluff D & A Manufacturing.

The result was a thrilling 2-1 nine-inning win for Denny's before a packed house at Ballard Field Friday night in the State AA fast Pitch Softball tournament.

In Friday's nights other winners bracket Falstaff balked Citizens State Bank 3-0 and in two losers bracket games Valentino's ousted Apothecary, 7-4, and Fremont Koglin Oil eliminated Meginnis Ford 3-1.

Steve Moser proved the root of Scottsbluff's undoing knocking in both runs for Denny's, including a run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth, scoring Roger Nolte. Nolte had earlier reached second on a hit.

It was the third time Saulnier had beaten Scottsbluff in his career.

"Mark's been thinking about this game for a week. He really wanted them," said Denny's Stan Kaltenberger.

Saulnier responded, holding Scottsbluff to six hits, walking none in what Saulnier described, "easily my best game of the year."

"I'm not a strikeout pitcher," said Saulnier, who fanned only three batters in nine innings.

"But defense is everything," Saulnier added, "I just tried to keep the ball around the plate and let the guys make the plays."

One player who particularly added Saulnier's cause was shortstop Jim Krause, who had several spectacular fielding plays despite suffering from a bad ear infection.

"Krause has done an excellent job ever since moving to shortstop from the outfield," added Kaltengerger.

One of Krause's finest plays went for naught as he making a diving catch, hurdling the fence, running into the bleachers and emerged holding onto the ball.

However, an illegal pitch was ruled on the play nullifying the play.

"The umpire ruled I had touched my glove with the resin bag," said Saulnier. "I've never heard of the rule before but I guess it is a rule."

Nevertheless the call seemed a little picky to Kaltenberger. "It is a rule and you've got to go by it but on the other hand you don't want to take the game away from the players."

The ruling was also called twice on Scottsbluff Jordan Schaub, who pitched well for the losers, fanning 14 batters.

Despite the win, Kaltenberger still fears Scottsbluff "I expect them to be in the finals. That Schaub is one of the best pitchers in the state."

Tom Novak smashed a three-run homer with two down in the fifth inning to give Falstaff its winning margin.

Lefty Scheary and Jay Phipps stilled the usually potent bats of citizens, holding the bankers to six hits. 18-year-old Scott Votava pitching for Citizens turned in a creditable performance allowing just four hits including Novak's home run.

Valentino's rallied from a 2-0 deficit behind the steady hitting of Bob Barrett to defeat Apothecary. Barrett had three hits and knocked in three runs to spark Val's.

Valentino's won despite three home runs by Apothecary. Rod Yoeki hit a solo and two run homers while Dennis Luennen added a solo blast to account for all of Apothecary's runs off of Val's hurler Dick Ude.

Roger Peterson of Koglin Oil fanned 10 batters and allowed just four hits to pace his team to its second win of the tournament after suffering an initial 12-2 loss to Denny's Champlin.

Action resumes in the tournament at 9 a.m. Saturday with games running all day and evening.

Foreign Intent In Executive Handicap

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Paul Jones knows 3-year-olds don't defeat older horses very often. Yet it's a challenge the Lincoln owner is quick to accept.

"We're trying older horses with 3-year-olds on what he has done in the past and what horses he has run against," said Foreign Intent's owner, who is running his Lincoln Derby winner in Saturday's Executive Board Handicap at the State Fairgrounds.

"It's a question of either running him or staying in the barn. Foreign Intent was meeting the toughest horses in Omaha. He wasn't quite good enough in the big (he finished fifth in the Omaha Gold Cup with three winners of $100,000 races this year). Of course, you'd give more consideration to running a 3-year-old against other 3-year-olds, but we're going to try the older horses.

Jones is quick to label the mile and 1/16th chase's top-weight, C. E. Johnson and Bennett Radziner's Ben's Whiz, as the biggest threat for the winner's share of the $6,000 purse.

"Ben's Whiz has run with the best of them in Omaha. You have to respect all the horses in the race," he said. "They're all capable. You have to have racing luck. Sometimes you can have the best horse in the race and still not win."

Foreign Intent, is trying to become the first horse to win the Lincoln Derby (for 3-year-olds) and the Executive Board Handicap.

Ben's Whiz, a participant in the $105,387.50 Cornhusker Handicap at Ak-Sar-Ben, lost a head verdict here two weeks ago in the $5,000 President's Cup chase over one mile, will be seeking his second Lincoln win. He scored in an allowance test over one mile in his initial Lincoln race.

A winner of $19,062 this year on two wins, three seconds and three thirds in 16 outings, he is dropping one pound (124-123) in the weight assignments by racing secretary Bob Pollock from the President's Cup.

The President's Cup victor, M. D. Van Patten's Merrill's Flight, is gaining four pounds (112-116), thereby gaining a seven-pound advantage over Ben's Whiz. He carried 12 pounds less than Ben's Whiz in the President's Cup.

Another 3-year-old, Paul Kemling's Patsy's Reign, will also be seeking to upset the older competitors. A filly who has earned $36,140 for her Aurora owner on three triumphs, six seconds and four thirds in 5 appearances this year, Patsy's ran second in last week's Lincoln Derby to Foreign Intent.

Other entrants and their weights include Felix Beda's Bed A Bundle, 118 pounds; Ed Luther's Ride The Bubbles, 117; L. P. Brandvick's Larrijo, 115; William Eidam's Derby Bill, 111; Mart Tompkins' Oklahoma Shiek, 110; and Marvin Leseberg's Idaline, 109.

The Executive Board Handicap, which has attracted a full field of 10 runners, is the 26-day meeting's closing feature. The nine-race program concludes the most successful season in the track's history.

Coaches, Teams Anxious For Shrine Bowl All-Star Game

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Chadron's Dale Stahlha may not be the most prominent name in a cast of 66 Shrine Bowl football players who will compete in the 16th annual contest Saturday.

But the Class B all-star may be the busiest on Memorial Stadium's AstroTurf. He's the only player on either team scheduled to start both offensively and defensively.

Stahlha is 5-11 and 193 pounds, but he might be five pounds lighter when the game is over. North head Shrine coach Keith Staehr of Kimball plans to start Stahlha at offensive left guard and defensive middle guard.

Staehr, however, indicates that Lexington's Mark Bappe is slated for heavy duty at middle guard to alleviate Stahlha's workload.

Although the North squad was selected by former Lexington coach Noel Martin with a wide-open offense foremost in mind, the reins were turned over to Staehr when Martin became backfield coach at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Staehr's coaching philosophy is exactly the opposite of Martin's. Instead of a wide-open attack with multiple alignments, he adheres to a more conservative tight set.

"We'll work mostly out of the tight set, but we'll slot some with a wing or a flanker," offers Staehr.

Head South coach Milt Tenopir, formerly of McCook and now a graduate assistant coach at Nebraska, is most wary of the North's quickness, especially in its backfield.

"I definitely think the key to the whole ball game is if we can cope with their quickness," says Tenopir. "But it's not as though we're exactly slow. They're not that much quicker up front than we are, but they are quicker overall."

Both Tenopir and Staehr are uncertain what effect a hot day will have on their respective teams since weather has been mostly cool for the 2-week training camps.

"I've been hoping for 105 degree days," says Staehr. "We're in better shape. We need the heat. When it was hot Monday, the kids moaned, but I was tickled."

Although the North backfield is tagged highly dangerous with such explosive threats as Lexington's Ted Harvey, Columbus Lakeview's Jim Pillen and Omaha Northwest's Rick Kling, the South backfield has equally high credentials.

Lincoln Pius X's Jim Hamersky will be at the controls at quarterback. Bellevue's Monte Anthony, who has recovered from a shoulder injury, is set at I-back. Omaha South's Darrell Walton is at wingback and John Mascarello of Omaha Gross at fullback.

Hamersky hopes to hook up with his favorite prep pass target, all-star John Magsamen, who is back at full strength after sustaining an ankle injury early in the week.

Walton, Hamersky and Omaha Westside defensive tackle Pat Gibbons, another who has recovered from a severe ankle injury, were named tri-captains for the South team Thursday.

North tri-captains are Lakeview's Pillen, Lexington's Harvey and Omaha Benson defensive tackle Roberto Parker.

Tenopir indicated that Arapahoe's Steve Mather, injured in last Sunday's scrimmage, will not start Saturday. But Mather kicked 38 or 40 extra point tries in Thursday's practice and will kick Saturday. "We hope to get him in some at linebacker, too," says Tenopir.

According to Tenopir, his players "are starting to get butterflies now. They've been talking about the game. They're getting primed up, but we don't want to get them jacked up too early. We've eliminated the rah-rah for the most part."

Friday's game kept the 4,500 fans in their seats until the final minute. Past games had been decided by 15, 11, 35, 22 and 7 points and the 7-point differential last year hardly reflected the lopsidedness that prevailed.

The North, in recording its fourth consecutive win after two opening losses in the series, retained an ironic all-star fact — the favored team has never won.

Coaches, Teams Anxious For Shrine Bowl All-Star Game

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Chadron's Dale Stahl may not be the most prominent name in a cast of 66 Shrine Bowl football players who will compete in the 16th annual contest Saturday.

But the Class B all-state may be the busiest on Memorial Stadium's AstroTurf. He's the only player on either team scheduled to start both offensively and defensively.

Stahl is 5-11 and 193 pounds, but he might be five pounds lighter when the game is over. North head Shrine coach Keith Staehr of Kimball plans to start Stahl at offensive left guard and defensive middle guard.

Staehr, however, indicates that Lexington's Mark Bappe is slated for heavy duty at middle guard to alleviate Stahl's workload.

Although the North squad was selected by former Lexington coach Noel Martin with a wide-open offense foremost in mind, the reins were turned over to Staehr when Martin became backfield coach at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Staehr's coaching philosophy is exactly the opposite of Martin's. Instead of a wide-open attack with multiple alignments, he adheres to a more conservative tight set.

"We'll work mostly out of the tight set, but we'll slot some with a wing or a flanker," offers Staehr.

Head South coach Milt Tenopir, formerly of McCook and now a graduate assistant coach at Nebraska, is most wary of the North's quickness, especially in its backfield.

"I definitely think the key to the whole ball game is if we can cope with their quickness," says Tenopir. "But it's not as though we're exactly slow. They're not that much quicker up front than we are, but they are quicker overall."

Both Tenopir and Staehr are uncertain what effect a hot day will have on their respective teams since weather has been mostly cool for the 2-week training camps.

"I've been hoping for 105 degree days," says Staehr. "We're in better shape. We need the heat. When it was hot Monday, the kids moaned, but I was tickled."

Although the North backfield is tagged highly dangerous with such explosive threats as Lexington's Ted Harvey, Columbus Lakeview's Jim Pillen and Omaha Northwest's Rick Klug, the South backfield has equally high credentials.

Lincoln Pius X's Jim Hamersky will be at the controls at quarterback. Bellevue's Monte Anthony, who has recovered from a shoulder injury, is set at I-back. Omaha South's Darrell Walton is at wingback and John Mascarello of Omaha Gross at fullback.

Hamersky hopes to hook up with his favorite prep pass target, all-stater John Magsamen, who is back at full strength after sustaining an ankle injury early in the week.

Walton, Hamersky and Omaha Westside defensive tackle Pat Gibbons, another who has recovered from a severe ankle injury, were named tri-captains for the South team Thursday.

North tri-captains are Lakeview's Pillen, Lexington's Harvey and Omaha Benson defensive tackle Roberto Parker. Tenopir indicated that Arapahoe's Steve Mather, injured in last Sunday's scrimmage, will not start Saturday. But Mather kicked 38 or 40 extra point tries in Thursday's practice and will kick Saturday. "We hope to get him in some at linebacker, too," says Tenopir.

According to Tenopir, his players "are starting to get butterflies now. They've been talking about the game. They're getting primed up, but we don't want to get them jacked up too early. We've eliminated the rah-rah for the most part."
